285 RESCUED FROM LINER BUNKER HILL

The steamship Bunker Hill, on her way from Boston to New York, ran on the rocks near Nobska Light, in Vineyard Sound, in the darkness of early morning to-day and the crash tore such a hole in her that she had to be beached.

285 PASSENGERS SAVED

Intense excitement followed among the leaking and the word ran among the 285 passengers aboard. William Weiss of Jamaica Plain, who was on the ship, declared that the colored boys and women help became panic stricken and rushed to lower the life boats at once, and that an engineer with a big monkey wrench in his hand quieted them.

Women ran carrying dressing the ship, thinly clad, men after them, some rushed from sleep by the terrific crash that ran aboard when the steamer struck the rocks. Some of the women fell on their knees and prayed.

Brought by Train to Boston.

The passengers were brought from Woods Hole by train to Boston reaching the South Station at 10:10. They told thrilling stories of their experience. Some of them were inclined to blame the officers of the ship for knocking them in ignorance as to what had happened.

They also offered severe criticism because the boat had been run on the rocks on a clear night with a lighthouse as close that one could throw a cane from the Bunker Hill and hit it.

One of the officers of the ship said that the vessel had been turned from its course so as not to hit a coal barge, but one of the passengers saw a coal barge.

When the steamer left New York she carried a particularly heavy cargo of freight. Most of the passengers were on holiday trips and there was a large percentage of women among them.

Thrown from Berths.

The Bunker Hill, although rapidly filling with water, made her way to Vineyard Haven. When daylight came the passengers were transferred to another boat and they were landed at Woods Hole. From there they were brought to Boston by train.

How the vessel came to run ashore is a mystery. It was a clear night and she must have been out of her course.

The weather was delightfully cool. The passengers retired and all was quiet on the big ship when there was a sudden jarring that shook the steamer.

Some of the passengers were thrown from their berths. All of them were awakened. Men hastily dressed and ran on deck, seeking to find out what had happened. Women shriek rang forth out of their staterooms and cried out in their fright.

In a few minutes the decks were alive with hastily-dressed and half-dressed people. The officers of the boat were too busy finding out what had happened themselves to pay much attention to the passengers at first. As soon as the steamer struck, the engines were reversed and full steam was turned on to back the ship from the rocks and sand. This effort made a great noise and the quivering of the boat added to the excitement of those aboard. Every one ran about crying out:

"What's happened? What's happened?"

The Bunker Hill managed to get off the rocks, and then the passengers were told that they were safe, but many of them declined to go back to their berths and go to sleep.

Appeal by Wireless.

Most of the women got fully dressed and prepared to get off the ship at the first opportunity.

It soon became known that the ship was leaking, and that she would be unable to proceed on her trip. Late naturally disappointed the passengers and many of them became almost hysterical.

It was reported that there was six feet of water in the forward hold, and that in spite of the pumps the water was gaining. The ship put into Vineyard Haven Harbor and the wireless operator flashed the call for help signal through the air.

Captain Leslie answered the call and put the passengers that they were not in the least danger—that it was impossible for the vessel to sink.

Two steamers of the New Haven Railroad responded to the wireless call. They were the Northland and the old Nobska. They steamed up near the Bunker Hill, ready for any emergency.

To Go Into Drydock.

The Bunker Hill is to be towed to New York as soon as the weather appears in a condition to stand the trip, according to the statement of officials of the Metropolitan Company, of the Bunker officers to-day. No statements will be taken into drydock for repairs just how much time this will occupy, or the extent of the repairs desired could not be determined until the ship is going thoroughly examined. It is thought it might mean a month or two before the Bunker Hill for her regular trips.

Plans will be on sailing to-day. It was announced at the offices of the company that there is still in mind which would use to take the places of our disabled steamer. The Massachusetts still continues to make its regular trips.

The steamer Bunker Hill, which has figured in several other mishaps, was launched at Philadelphia, March 26, 1907, being christened by Rose Fitzgerald, daughter of Mayor Fitzgerald. Her sister ships, the Massachusetts and the Old Colony, were launched in the same year.

The Bunker Hill is 402 feet and 10 inches over all, and her extreme beam is 54 feet 10 inches. She has a gross tonnage of 4 feet. In building the steamer special attention was paid to give protection in case of collision or grounding. A double hull is fitted throughout the engine and boiler compartment. There are six watertight compartments extending to the main deck, and in addition the double bottom and the space under the water-tight deck is again divided into nineteen additional water-tight compartments. The bulkheads are also enclosed to additional bulkheads. It is these precautions which made to-day's accident far less serious than it otherwise would have been.

The Bunker Hill has twin screw, reciprocating engines. The steamer is capable of making twenty knots an hour. Steam is supplied to the engines by nine coal burning auxiliary and steering gear is in the after deck.

Throughout the fittings of the boat are of the most elaborate character. To add to the comfort of the passengers has been installed an electric fan in each stateroom. The Bunker Hill was built by the Cramps at Philadelphia. It was the intention originally to name her the Massachusetts, but Mayor Fitzgerald personally asked that the boat bear the name of the Bunker Hill in consequence his daughter was chosen to christen the craft.

The Bunker Hill is owned by the Maine Steamship Company and sails from India Wharf to Bath.

The Maine Steamship Company reported to the press to-night that if the word came that they could be transferred to the Fall River line, and the passengers would be transferred to that vessel without accident. But not all of the men, women and

AD MEN VOTE FOR LEADER

The big fight for president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America is on at Ford Hall. Herbert S. Houston of New York and George W. Coleman of Boston are leading. The Boston delegation is in caucus and there is a merry fight on whether Mr. Coleman, president of the Pilgrim Publicity Association, shall receive the forty votes of that organization. The decision of the Bostonians may turn the election.

Mr. Houston has the entire Chicago delegation, consisting of fifty votes, the New York delegation with fifty-eight, it is says the word, and the Northwestern delegations. The solid Southwest and Southern delegations are solid for Mr. Coleman. It is a toss-up which will win.

The fact that Dallas is hot after the convention and that Dallas is in the same division with St. Louis has put I. H. Sawyer of St. Louis out of the running for the present. He may be a compromise winner.

The following letter was sent to President Taft:

Hon. William H. Taft,

White House,

Washington, D. C.

My Dear Mr. President:

The Associated Advertising Clubs of America deeply appreciate your cordial greeting to the seventh annual convention, and while acknowledging your tribute to the marked advancement of modern advertising in our national life, rejoice to assure you that the spirit of this convention on historic soil is an augury of still greater progress along legitimate lines of this vital branch of commercial activities. Wishing you an early and happy respite from your executive cares, at your Summer home, I remain, in behalf of the association,

Yours Very Sincerely,

Samuel C. Dobbs, president.

DOUBLE ASTOR-FORCE ROMANCE

NEWPORT, Aug. 4.—Society to-day is discussing with interest the likelihood of an engagement being announced between Vincent Astor and Katherine Force, whose sister, Madeline, is to wed Colonel John Jacob Astor, the young man's father. Young Astor and Miss Katherine have been seen much together of late and for months their romance has been hinted at. In fact, the announcement that they were to marry would not have caused quite the ripple of comment and interest as that created by the formal announcement of Colonel Astor's engagement to Miss Madeline Force.

Although Mrs. William H. Force and her daughter have returned to New York, it is expected that Newport will see them again soon, as the Forces are contemplating taking a cottage at Newport for the rest of the season. The wedding of Colonel Astor and Miss Madeline will undoubtedly take place here.

Colonel Astor was supremely happy when he arrived here with his fiancee. "Isn't she cute?" he remarked to the newspaper men who gathered about him as he and Miss Madeline were at the pier preparing to take a launch for Colonel Astor's yacht. The prompt assent seemed to please him greatly.

As the party arrived at the New York Yacht Club pier in taxicabs, Miss Force, her mother and the young man hurried into the Noma's gig, which lay waiting to carry them to the great ocean-going yacht that lay in midstream. Colonel Astor was happily nervous.

As the yacht's gig, manned by coxswain and ensign, dashed away from the yacht club float with a shriek of wills from in her wake, the party was surprised to

NICKERSON MYSTERY DEEPENS

Coroner Lincoln of Providence, who is conducting the inquest at Little Compton, R. I., in an attempt to clear up the mystery surrounding the murder of Mrs. Lilly C. Nickerson, declared to-day that he will summon Charles de Mayo and James Cusick of Boston to appear before him as witnesses in the case next week.

De Mayo has admitted that he was the strange man who accompanied Mrs. Nickerson to her apartments in Eglesion street the night before her fatal trip to New York. Cusick is the cabman who has told of seeing a man with Mrs. Nickerson a few days before she was murdered aboard the Joy liner Georgia.

"I believe that both these men will come if I request them to," said Coroner Lincoln to-day. "If they refuse, we shall see what can be done to compel them to come to Rhode Island. I shall confer with Attorney General Greenough to-morrow, and then with Coroner Gifford. We intend to have all persons testify who know anything at all about the case. I will re-open the inquest Monday at Little Compton."

De Mayo's Story.

De Mayo told to-day of an accidental meeting with Mrs. Nickerson, of his acceptance of her offer to "treat," and of their going to a nearby hotel. Later, he took the woman home in a carriage. De Mayo is employed by the Trimont Manufacturing Company of Roxbury. His story follows:

"I was standing on Columbus avenue, near the Roxbury Crossing station, waiting for a City Point car, when I saw a woman standing on the sidewalk. I noticed that she seemed intoxicated, and went over to look at her. She spoke to me and asked me to tell her where she could get a car for Washington street, as she wanted to go down town to make a payment on some furniture. Seeing that she was apparently intoxicated I told her that the

Saving Bunker Hill Passengers

The excursion steamship Uncatena took off the Boston bound passengers from the Bunker Hill after the latter hit a rock in the sound near Woods Hole.

FAIL TO FIND PEABODY GIRL

Efforts of the Peabody police to trace eighteen-year-old Ida Lallinen, a Finnish girl, who disappeared last Sunday, were baffled to-day, and the authorities who have been heading searching parties said they were as much mystified as ever to account for the girl's absence from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Vickery of Marblehead, at whose home she was employed.

The Marblehead police have also been working on the case, but they have been unable to find any clew which would seem to explain the girl's disappearance.

The missing girl is the daughter of Malachias Lallinen of West Peabody. She was the oldest of six children. Her mother is distracted over the disappearance of her daughter.

PRESIDENT SENDS TREATIES TO SENATE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—President Taft sent the arbitration treaties to the Senate shortly after 12 o'clock to-day, with a special message urging their ratification.

M'CLENNEN IS TO WED AGAIN

Edward F. McClennen, one of the best known lawyers of Boston, whose wife eloped with her husband's friend, a bridge associate, Robert William Sawyer, Jr., of Cambridge nearly a year ago, to-day took out a license to marry Miss Mary Crane, who lived in the McClennen home in Cambridge as the close friend of the wife.

Mr. McClennen entered suit for divorce last October. The decree was returned in his favor the next month, and was made absolute on May 22 last. His taking out a license to-day marked the closing chapter of one of the most remarkable cases of its kind ever revealed in Boston.

According to the facts that came to light last Fall, Mrs. McClennen confessed to her self-sacrificing love for Sawyer to her husband and begged his forgiveness. She and Sawyer then went away together.

Mr. McClennen, in making application for the marriage license to-day, gave his age as thirty-five and that of Miss Crane as thirty-two. Miss Crane is the daughter of Joshua Crane, a wealthy retired citizen of Brookline. Miss Crane is a fine looking woman of great refinement and splendid education. For years she was an intimate friend of Mrs. McClennen that neighbors used to remark that the pair "were just like two birds in a nest."

INJURED SHIP LEAKING BADLY

children were safe on the Uncpena they were in a highly nervous state.

H. Davis of Camden, N. J., in discussing the accident said:

"I and Mrs. Davis were sound asleep when the vessel struck. It was shortly before 2 o'clock. The shock was so great that we were both awakened suddenly with a start. The ship struck us here and it struck hard.

"We got up quickly. There was a great deal of confusion. It was pretty dark as the moon had gone down. The tide was rising and was within two hours of flood.

"We learned that the lady nurse was among the officers took us in charge and we were changed to another stateroom aboard. Several thousand and other places were called. We put into Vineyard Haven and steamed slowly to the wharf.

"Then the New Bedford boat I suppose came alongside, and we were transferred to that vessel. Before this was quite a light breakfast was served on the Bunker Hill. Taking it all in all, we got along very well, I think, and I'm glad that nothing more serious happened.

"We were a little late in getting to Boston, but no one seemed to worry much about that.

Confusion Among Passengers.

Miss Gertrude Westover, a Chicago girl passenger, had come to New York yesterday, and is on her way to Maine. She said:

"Oh, it was awful! First there was an awful crash, and then the front of the steamer tipped way up. I was sure we started, but I got right back on my bed as the engines stopped. I slipped on my kimono and ran out on deck.

"Then other people were running about, and no one knew what we had run against. We didn't know whether we were sinking or not. There weren't any officers or stewards around to reassure us. Then I went back and put on my clothes as quickly as I could and came up on deck. There the men had already cut the fastenings from the life boats but they did not have to lower them.

William Wenst, of No. 40 Paul Gore street, Jamaica Plain, tells this story:

"When we struck the first pilot was at the wheel, according to the word that went around. I don't know if he knew he had six lights to plain daylight from which to set his bearings. It was a clear night, with a moon shining, and the pilot ought to have known. We said that he had steered out of the way of a coal barge, but none of the passengers saw this barge, so far as I heard.

"I was asleep when the strike came. It woke me up. I heard noises stream, and got up. I ran outdoors, and as I passed through the dining room, one of the stewards grabbed me and said there were orders to keep everybody in. I said I would. They were setting them to everyone.

"We were standing and speculating when the second blow came. The second blow sounded worse than the first. The second jolt seemed to lower a small boat. The officials ordered them.

"Captain was gone, and soon had every. She piloted, and the alarm didn't show in the way people got out. When we swung into this cove the lighthouse seemed very close, only forty feet away. We almost hit it.

"When we hit hard, the fore part of the boat sank till the water on the first deck. The wind shifted her stern around till the whole boat was practically afloat. The forward compartment was flooded.

Mrs. Mary Keogh of Chicago said:

"I was awakened by a terrible grinding and was pretty nearly thrown out of my berth. The woman in the cabin across the way was thrown out into the floor. Outside everyone was running around in fog to find out what had happened. But there wasn't much of a panic. One man was hysterical though. I only saw him on the deck, and he just sat down and cried. Everybody else was quiet and calm though, although some of them were frightened. I was only a little scared myself at first. On deck the officers seemed perfectly calm and everything was well managed."

Ship Slightly Listed.

Mr. and Mrs. John Tweddi and their two boys, John and Kenneth, of Rosedale Park, New Jersey, were coming to Boston on their way North. Mr. Tweddi said:

"The first thing I knew was a jump and this was followed by a second of grinding sound. I was thrown out of my berth and landed against the opposite wall. It was dark outside and nobody seemed to know quite what had occurred. The ship was slightly tipped. I went up on deck and out of the port side we saw and struck a rock, but that there was no danger.

D. Hauck, president of the J. D. Hauck Realty Company, Quincy, Illinois, was on board with the Hauck party. He said:

"We were asleep in our stateroom shortly before 2 o'clock on the starboard side of the ship, when we felt a sharp blow as if the vessel struck something. I was in a lower berth and was tossed from the berth. Then followed a scraping grinding sound, as if the ship were running over a wharf or something rubbed long, rough, jagged pieces of stone or timber. I got out of bed, put on clothes hurriedly and everybody who rushed on deck went to the port side of the ship. Within 200 yards was a lighthouse, right on shore, clear and there was no fog. There were no officers on deck and there was much confusion on the part of the passengers on account of this.

"The vessel hitched off the bar and the engines were set to work sounding calls for help. A boat came alongside and shortly before 6 o'clock we boarded it and were taken into Woods Hole."

MAN'S STORY OF MRS. NICKERSON

best thing that she could do was to go home, and not go into Boston as she was. This was about 4:30 in the evening.

"Then she told me that she would go home later but that first we had better have a drink. I told her that I would have one with her but that all the money that I had with me was fifteen cents. Accordingly she told me that she would pay for the drinks and that then she would go home. She gave me $2 and then we went into a nearby hotel.

"We had the drinks, for which she paid. She insisted that we should have another. I had one, but she would not take another.

"The last drink that she took seemed too much for her, and I say that the best thing I could do would be to take her home. I took her into the open air. She said that she wanted a taxicab and that we would drive around a bit before we went to her home. So we called a boy who was near and sent him across the street to the livery stable. I gave him directions.

"He came back shortly after and told us that the people at the stable would not let us have a carriage unless we came over ourselves. The woman and I went over and hired the carriage. She wanted to go to a place on Dover street and I told the man at the front of the stable how to get there. I would charge to take us to No. 20 Egleston street, and he told me $2.

"He gave him the $2 and we drove off with him. We did not go straight to Egleston street up Columbus avenue, but went through the Armory yard. When we came to Egleston street the driver kept going but the horse was. We then drove past to the next house to hers and got out. I had to help her into the house; as we sent the driver away. I had to half carry her up the steps. This was some time after 9 o'clock.

"I helped her into her room and she sat on the bed and talked to me for some time. I do not know exactly what time I left, but I think that it was about 10:45.

"I came down the back stairs as I came up, and left the house. She thanked me for what I had done for her and told me to come around again. I did not see her and did not know she was ill. I did not see her again until this morning, when I went to come to see her as I was going to work.

VINCENT ASTOR IN ROMANCE, TOO

receive a cheering farewell from a band of children on the Recreation Pier at East Twenty-fifth street. They waved their hands and shrilly cried their congratulations. Colonel Astor responded by riding and waving a handkerchief.

Although Miss Force will be received in Newport and will meet the many personal friends of Colonel Astor, those attractions will be but a quiet prelude to her later triumphs. On August 16 one of the great events of the year at Newport, in which John Jacob Astor always occupies the most prominent position, is to take place. That is the date for the Astor Cup races.

Miss Force will be prepared under the guidance of her mother, a matron of pretty form and of commanding presence and grace.

Mrs. Force seemed very happy as she tripped down to the yacht club float. She tenderly held her parasol over the youth who closely escorted her. Her daughter was in advance of the party, and was next to step into the gig and take a seat forward. There she waited and closely watched Colonel Astor as he turned to chat with the others.

Then he smiled.

"Don't be exclusive."

The prompt assent seemed to please him immensely.

"Have you decided on the date of your wedding?" Colonel Astor was asked.

"Really, you must ask Mr. Dobbyne, my private secretary," the Colonel replied. "He is here to tell you everything you want to know."

"But, tell us," pleaded the reporters. "Will the future Mrs. Astor aspire to social leadership, or have you both decided to lead a retired life apart from the excitement of society life?"

"Mrs. Astor-to-be-always is the finest young lady and will have an answer for everything."

But Mr. Dobbyne, after the gig departed, proved quite equal to his chief in strategic reticence.

For weeks Colonel Astor and Miss Force have dined frequently in the little garden veranda on the Fifth avenue side of the Hotel St. Regis. But Mrs. Force, her daughter Katherine or Vincent Astor have always been members of the party.

FARM MYSTERY WITNESS GONE

BARRE, Aug. 4.—An effort will be made in Worcester today to locate John Plunkett, an employe at the farm of Mrs. Myra A. Bemis, whom she declares, will verify her story that Frank Cooley admitted taking strychnine just before he died. Holbrook, who left the farm while the investigation of Cooley's death was in progress, is wanted that he may repeat in full the events and conversations on the night of the tragedy.

Until a report be had from the Harvard Medical School on the results of the examination of Cooley's stomach, little else will be done by the authorities. Mrs. Bemis today told her first detailed story of the case. It was as follows:

"I heard cries coming from Cooley's room. I went in and asked him what the matter was. He said that he felt sorry for the way that he had acted towards me. Then he remarked that life was not worth living. For a moment or two I thought that the man had a mere fit of weeping.

"Suddenly he doubled up. I asked, 'Frank, have you taken any poison?' for a great fear came into my mind.

MISS BARRYMORE SERVES PAPERS

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—Although unusual efforts were made to keep the fact secret, some of her friends going so far as to assert that a reconciliation was likely, it was learned positively today that Ethel Barrymore has served Russell Griswold Colt with papers in a suit for absolute divorce under the laws of the State of New York, which recognize only one ground for a decree.

It was reported last night that more than one person had been named in the papers, their identities have been kept dark. The only clue lay in the repetition of the story that a society woman had been specified.

Papers Served at Yale Club.

Colt was surprised in his rooms in the Yale Club on Tuesday night when the service was effected. Mrs. Colt had come here from Quebec, where she is summering, on that afternoon to sign the final affidavits. Up to the moment she attached her signature to the documents even her own lawyers were in doubt as to what course she would take.

Her family was as much at a loss as her friends, and Mr. Colt himself, who had been making efforts to bring about a reconciliation, was the last to expect that the action would come at this time. But when he had recovered from his surprise he readily agreed to the suggestion that the whole affair be gone through with as quietly as possible.

Miss Barrymore spent no more time in New York than was necessary. She was informed that her husband had been served and, the object of her journey accomplished, she left again on Wednesday morning.

Friends Attempt to Settle.

Friends made an effort to have her agree to meet Mr. Colt again before her departure, hoping that an eleventh hour reconciliation might be brought about. She declined the plan in characteristic manner. She had only one thing to ask, she said, and that was that Mr. Colt as well as the others say nothing about the proceedings. Then she boarded the train to return to "that blessed baby," as she calls her boy, who is under two years old.

Colt is a wealthy himself and is the grandson of the millionaire head of the Equitable Trust. Miss Barrymore has asked for no alimony. She demands the entire custody of the child, and asks that an order for its maintenance be issued.

It is probable that Mr. Colt will not fight the suit, but his family is desirous that some arrangement be made whereby they may occasionally have charge of the boy, who is named after Colonel Samuel Pomeroy Colt, his grandfather.

Miss Barrymore had been in Quebec only a few days when she received the news that Colt had been served. She left immediately through New York on her way from the West and had declined to say a word about the report that had come from Los Angeles, where she was playing at the time, that she intended to separate from her husband.

She crossed Colt's trail on the day she arrived at St. John's—a little village near Montreal. He had been there for a week, and left for Quebec 24 hours before Miss Barrymore reached the latter city. She arrived at the Chateau Frontenac on Tuesday night, and left for Montreal, where she stayed over for the afternoon, although during the time since her first report had come out many of her friends were pooh-poohing the story that she would really quit him.

TERROR REIGNS ALL OVER HAYTI

PORT AU PRINCE, Hayti, Aug. 4 (fighting between factions in the northern[illegible] army broke out early today in the streets of the capital and in the engagements twenty were killed. Troops of General Firmin's army clashed with soldiers under General Leconte.

As a result of the street fighting and the bombardment of the city by the warships which followed the foreign marines in the harbor landed more marines. Rebels attempted to pillage the entire city and the leaders gave no indication of preventing them.

The Dutch steamer Prins der Nederlanden, with ex-President Simon and his family on board, left for Kingston, Jamaica the ship steamed from the bay of the international war fleet in the harbor fired a parting salute for the deposed President.

The French cruiser Estrees is expected late today or tomorrow to protect French lives and interests.

The battle between opposing forces of the revolutionary army followed a siege of former. Pillagers had taken advantage of the electric light bulbs, leaving the city in darkness. At times the sky was lighted up by the glare of fires set by looters. Soldiers extinguished some of the fires. Others were allowed to burn themselves out. General Leconte brought about a temporary rupture between himself and General Firmin by assuming the role of dictator.

To Safely Reduce Fat Without Drugs or Starving

Can you recommend anything that will safely reduce some of my fat? Although a young woman 23 years old, I am 5 feet 6 inches in height and fully five times I married, and I now weigh one hundred and 200 pounds. I am an actress and I am really ashamed of my great dimensions. I have taken various treatments I have seen advertised in this paper, but while they did reduce me a few pounds unquestionably while taking them, the fat quickly came back, and then were usually ills and various ailments that upset my stomach and greatly weakened me. My friends tell me I look handsome when my clothes system for reducing fat in your opinion, and you will see what it was.

Mrs. L. Y. M., New York City.

You probably refer to the treatment said to be some time ago concerning the remarkable discovery of Dr. F. Tyrrell, a prominent Philadelphia physician. Dr. Tyrrell reduced all over persons over 100 lbs. in this manner, and did not use a single drug, purgative or strenuous exercise. He claims that it is the only health—providing a weakening one and light exercise and gains in health and strength. Dr. Tyrrell has written a very interesting pamphlet, which he will send free to any one who writes him. He personally address it. Dr. Tyrrell, 1500 Chestnut Street Building, Scranton, Pa.

Dr. Tyrrell's method in this circumstance is the most sensible we have ever heard of, and we believe, interests and does not depend upon drugs or starving for results. We feel sure that you will gain by writing to him about it.

QUIT WORK ON PLANT'S BIG GAME PRESERVE

OSSIPEE, N. H., Aug. 4.—The work of converting the 5,000-acre mountain tract known as Ossipee Park into a great game preserve for some Boston millionaire, presumably Thomas G. Plant, the shoe manufacturer, has stopped. The small army of laborers has been paid off and sent away. Mystery surrounds the whole transaction. The closing of the property and the starting of the work. The purchase price was said to be $500,000. It is declared that Mr. Plant changed his mind about having a game preserve.

HERE'S THE WAY TO KEEP YOUR BABY WELL

Brief Ideas of Value for Mothers to Read.

At this time keep the children strong to avoid the dangerous diseases that threaten.

Don't dose the little ones with medicines containing alcohol or poisonous drugs.

Mothers with young children require pure nourishment such as Father John's Medicine contains.

Because the ingredients are of the same kind of food and nourishment that blood and tissue are made of—pure and wholesome—Father John's Medicine makes flesh and strength.

It cures consumption, checks the wasting away, nourishes the body and heals the lungs.

Croup is dangerous, but not if Father John's Medicine is at hand to check it.

children were safe on the Uncapena they were in a highly nervous state.

H. Davis of Camden, N. J., in discussing the accident said:

"I and Mrs. Davis were sound asleep when the vessel struck. It was shortly before 2 o'clock. The shock was so great that we were both awakened suddenly with a start. The ship struck twice and it struck hard.

"We got up quickly. There was a great deal of confusion. It was pretty dark on the vessel had gone down. The tide was the vessel had gone down. The tide was rising and was within two hours of flood.

"We learned that the ship was leaking but the officers told us that there was no great danger. There was wireless aboard, and New Bedford and other places were called. We put into Vineyard Haven and steamed slowly to the wharf.

"Then the New Bedford boat Uncapena came alongside and we were transferred to that vessel. Before this we had a light breakfast was served on the Bunker Hill. Taking it all in all, we got along very well, I think, and I'm glad that nothing more serious happened.

"We were a little late in getting to Boston, but no one seemed to worry much about that.

Confusion Among Passengers.

Miss Gertrude Westover, a Chicago girl passenger, had come to New York yesterday, and is on her way to Maine. She said:

"Oh, it was awful! First there was an awful crash, and then the front of the steamer tipped way up. I was sort of startled, but I got frightened when I heard the engines stop. I slipped on my kimono and ran out into the hall.

"A lot of other people were running about, and we all knew that we had run aground. We didn't know whether we were sinking or not. There weren't any officers or stewards around to reassure us. Then I went back and put on my clothes as quickly as I could and came up on deck. There the men had already cut the fastenings from the life-boats but they did not have to lower them.

Williamse Weinz, of No. 49 Paul Gore street, Jamaica Plain, tells the story:

"When we struck the first pilot was at the wheel, according to the word that went around. I don't know his name. He had six lights in plain sight from which to get his bearings. It was bright as day, a big moon shining, and the sky clear as a bell. The pilot said that he had steered out of the way of a coal barge, but some of the passengers saw this barge, so far as I heard.

"I was asleep when the strike came. It woke me up. I heard women scream, and got up. I ran outdoors, and as I passed through the dining room, one of the waiters grabbed me and said there were orders to go were coffee and rolls, so I had some. They were serving them to everyone.

"We were steaming at full speed when we struck. The colored help on board worked like a small boat. The captain quieted them.

"Captain was game, and soon had every one quieted, and the alarm didn't show in the way people acted. When we came into this cove the lighthouse seemed only about thirty feet away. We almost hit it.

"When we did beach, the fore part of the boat sank till she rested on the bottom. The stern didn't settle down around till the whole boat was practically stranded. The stern stuck way above water. The forward compartment was flooded."

Mrs. Mary Keough of Chicago said:

"I was awakened by a terrible grinding and was pretty nearly thrown out of my berth. The woman in the cabin across the way was thrown out onto the floor. Outside everyone was running around trying to find out what had happened. But there wasn't much of a panic. One man was hysterical though. Later I saw him on the deck, and he just laid down and refused to move. The women were very calm though, although some of them were frightened. I was only a little scared myself at first. On deck the officers seemed perfectly calm and everything was well managed."

Ship Slightly Listed.

Mr. and Mrs. John Toothill and their two boys, John and Kenneth, of Ridgefield Park, New Jersey, were coming to Boston on their way North. Mr. Toothill said:

"The first thing I knew was a jump and this was followed by a sound of grinding. I jumped up and ran out to find out what had happened.

"It was dark outside and nobody seemed to know quite what had occurred. The ship was slightly tipped. I went up on deck, and one of the men told me we had struck a rock, but that there was no danger.

F. G. Rouck, president of the J. D. Rauck Realty Company, Atlantic and Fourth avenues, Brooklyn, was on board in company with Elwood M. Townsend, treasurer of the same company. They were on a holiday trip to Bingham, Me. Mr. Townsend said:

"We were asleep in our stateroom shortly before 2 o'clock, on the starboard side of the ship, when we felt a slight blow as if the ship were striking rocks. I was in a lower berth and was tossed out from the berth. They followed a slow grinding sound, as if the ship were running on a sand bar. Then everyone rushed from their rooms and came on deck.

"The ship was listing to starboard and everybody, who rushed on deck, went to the port side of the ship. Within 200 yards was a lighthouse. The night was clear and there was no fog. There were no officers on deck and there was much confusion on the part of the passengers on account of this.

"The vessel backed off the bar and the wireless was set to work sending calls for help. A boat came alongside and shortly before 6 o'clock we boarded it and were taken into Woods Hole."

beat thing that she could do was to go home, and not go into Boston as she said. This was about 6:30 in the evening.

"Then she told me that she would go home later but that first we had better have a drink. I told her that I would have one with her but that all the money that I had with me was fifteen cents. Accordingly she told me that she would pay for the drinks and that then she would go home. She gave me $2 and then we went into a near-by hotel.

"We had the drinks, for which she paid. She insisted that we should have another, as I had one, but she would not take another.

"The last drink that she took seemed too much for her, and I say that the best thing I could do would be to take her home. I took her into the open air. She said that she wanted a taxicab and that we would drive around a bit before we went to her house. So we called a boy who was near and sent him across the street to the livery stable. I gave him 10 cents.

"He came back shortly after and told us that the people at the stable would not let us have a carriage unless we came over ourselves. The woman and I went over and hired the carriage. She wanted to get a taxicab, but they had none. The woman asked the man at the stable how much he would charge to take us to No. 20 Edgeton street, and he told us $2.

"I gave him the $2 and we set off with him. We did not go straight to Edgeton street, but Charles avenue, but went through Armory street. When we came to the Edgeton street the driver kept asking her where the house was. We finally came to the right house (o, yes) and got out. I had to help her into the house; so we sent the driver away. I had to hold her up on the stairs. This was some time after 9 o'clock.

"I helped her into her room and she sat on the bed and talked to me for some time. I do not know exactly what time I left, but I think that it was about 10:45. I then walked to the Dudley station, went up and left the house. She thanked me for what I had done for her and told me to come around again in the morning and that she would see me. I did not see her again until the next morning, when I came to see her as I was going to work.

Healthy Stomach a Necessity

If you would enjoy life. It is even more. It is the key to health and success. If you allow it to go back on you, you may as well throw up the sponge. But there is no need of doing that. Keep your stomach and entire system in perfect condition by the regular use of

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

It stimulates the flow of the saliva for the digestion of the starchy foods and also stimulates the output and flow of the gastric juice for the digestion of other foods. In this way and by its general tonic effect upon the nerves, heart and entire system it is of great assistance and is absorbed into the blood to be distributed to every organ and tissue of the body for nourishment and repair.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is the only whiskey that was taxed by the Government as a medicine during the Spanish-American War.

receive a cheering farewell from a band of children on the Recreation Pier at East Twenty-fifth street. They waved their hands and shrilly yelled their congratulations. Colonel Astor responded by rising and waving a handkerchief.

Although Miss Force will be received in Newport and will meet the many personal friends of Colonel Astor, those attentions will be but a quiet prelude to her later triumphs, on August 10 one of the great events of the year at Newport, in which John Jacob Astor always occupies the most prominent position, is to take place. That is the date for the Astor Cup races. Miss Force will be prepared under the tutelage of her mother, a matron of pretty face and of commanding presence and grace.

Mrs. Force seemed very happy as she tripped down to the yacht club float. She tenderly held her parasol over the youth who closely escorted her. Her daughter was in advance of the party, and was first to step into the gig and take a seat forward where she waited and closely watched Colonel Astor as he tarried to chat with the reporters.

Then he added:

"Isn't she cute"

The prompt assent seemed to please him immensely.

"Have you decided on the date of your wedding?" Colonel Astor was asked.

"Really, you must ask Mr. Dobbyne, my private secretary," the Colonel replied. "He is here to tell you everything you want to know."

"But tell us," pleaded the reporters, "will the future Mrs. Astor aspire to social leadership, or have you both decided to lead a retired life apart from the excitement of society life?"

"Gentlemen, Mr. Dobbyne is the finest living man, and will have an answer for everything."

But Mr. Dobbyne, after the gig departed, proved quite equal to his chief in skilled reticence.

For weeks Colonel Astor and Miss Force have dined frequently at the little garden verandah on the Fifth avenue side at the Hotel St. Regis. But Mrs. Force, her daughter Katherine and Vincent Astor have always been members of the party.

FARM MYSTERY WITNESS GONE

BARRE, Aug. 4—An effort will be made in Worcester to-day to locate John Holbrook, an employe at the farm of Mrs. Myra A. Rembs, whom she declares, will verify her story that Frank Cooley admitted taking strychnine just before he died. Holbrook, who left the farm while the investigation of Cooley's death was in progress, is wanted that he may repeat in full the events and conversations on the day Cooley died.

Until a report is had from the Harvard Medical School on the results of the examination of Cooley's stomach, little else will be done by the authorities. Mrs. Rembs to-day told her first detailed story of the case. It was as follows:

"I heard cries coming from Cooley's room. I went in and asked him what the matter was. He said that he felt sorry for the way that he had acted towards me. Then he remarked that life was not worth living. For a moment or two I thought that the man had a mere fit of weeping.

"Suddenly he doubled up. I asked, 'Frank, have you taken any poison?' for a great fear came into my mind.

MISS BARRYMORE SERVES PAPERS

NEW YORK, Aug. 4—Although unusual efforts were made to keep the fact secret, some of her friends going so far as to assert that a reconciliation was likely, it was learned positively to-day that Ethel Barrymore has served Russell Griswold Colt with papers in a suit for absolute divorce under the laws of the State of New York, which recognize only one ground for a decree.

It was reported last night that more than one person had been named in the papers but their identities have been kept dark. The only clue has to the repetition of the story that a society woman had been specified.

Papers Served at Yale Club.

Colt was surprised in his rooms in the Yale Club late Tuesday night when the service was effected. Mrs. Colt had come here from Quebec, where she is summering, on that afternoon to sign the final affidavits. Up to the moment she attached her signature to the documents even her own lawyers were in doubt as to what course she would take.

Her family was as much at a loss as her friends, and Mr. Colt himself, who had been making efforts to bring about a reconciliation, was the last to expect that the action would come at this time. But when he had recovered from his surprise he readily agreed to the suggestion that the whole affair be gone through with as quietly as possible.

Miss Barrymore spent no more time in New York than was necessary. She was informed that her husband had been served and, the object of her journey accomplished, she left again on Wednesday morning.

Friends Attempt to Settle.

Friends made an effort to have her agree to meet Mr. Colt again before her departure, hoping that an eleventh hour reconciliation might be brought about. She declined the plan in characteristic manner. She had only one thing to ask, she said, and that was that Mr. Colt as well as the others say nothing about the proceedings. Then she boarded the train to return to "that blessed baby," as she calls her boy, who is under two years old.

Although Colt is wealthy himself and is the son of the millionaire head of the Rubber Trust, Miss Barrymore has asked for no alimony. She demands the entire custody of the child, and asks that an order for its maintenance be posted.

It is probable that Mr. Colt will not fight the suit, but his family is desirous that some arrangement be made whereby they may occasionally have charge of the boy, who is named after Colonel Samuel Pomeroy Colt, his grandfather.

Miss Barrymore had been in Quebec only about a week ago when she made her hurried trip here. She had smuggled herself through New York on her way from the West and had declined to say a word about the report that had come from Los Angeles, where she was playing at that time, that she intended to separate from her husband.

She crossed Colt's trail on the day she arrived at St. John's, a little village near Montreal. He had been there to see his child about an hour before the mother arrived. She purposely avoided meeting him in Montreal, when he stated over the telephone, although during the time since the first report had come out many of her friends were beseeching the story that she would really quit him.

TERROR REIGNS ALL OVER HAYTI

PORT AU PRINCE, Hayti, Aug. 4—Fighting between factions in the revolutionist army broke out early to-day in the streets of the capital and in one engagement twenty were killed. Troops of General Firmin's army clashed with soldiers under General Leconte.

As a result of the street fighting and the conditions bordering on absolute anarchy which followed the foreign warships in the harbor landed marines. Both threatened to pillage the entire city and the leaders gave no indication of preventing them.

The Dutch steamer Prinz der Nederlanden, with ex-President Simon and his family on board, left for Kingston, Jamaica. As she steamed from the harbor the international war fleet in the harbor fired a parting salute for the deposed President.

The French cruiser Estrees is expected late to-day or to-morrow to protect French lives and interests.

The battle between opposing forces of the revolutionary army followed a night of terror. Pillagers had shut off most of the electric light mains, leaving the city in darkness. At times the sky was lighted up by the glare of fires set by looters. Soldiers extinguished some of the fires. Others were allowed to burn themselves out. General Leconte brought about the open rupture between himself and General Firmin by assuming the role of dictator.

To Safely Reduce Fat Without Drugs or Starving

One can recommend anything that will safely remove some of my fat! Although a young woman only 25 years old—I have taken on weight fearfully ever since I married, and I now weigh over 200 pounds. My hips and bust are enormous and I am really ashamed of my great double chin. I have bought several treatments I have seen advertised in this paper, but, while they did relieve me a few pounds temporarily, while taking them, the fat promptly came back, and they were mostly pills and violent cathartics that upset my stomach and greatly weakened me. My husband says he saw something about some new dietless system for reducing fat in your paper, and I am too tired to write it myself. Mrs. L. Y. M., New York City.

Dr. Edward Tenney, to whom the article published by us some time ago concerning the remarkable discoveries of Dr. F. Tenney, a specialist in Adelphia, Philadelphia, Dr. Tenney reduced his own weight over 100 lbs., in the most natural way, and did not use a single drug, purgative or cathartic, or any other process of the kind. His article—everything he wanted—took only eight days, during which time his weight was reduced 20 lbs., and just has been refused life insurance because of his former weight, which accompanied many complications of heart and kidneys, now he has been given a clean bill of health by the same life company that had previously rejected him. He is now a picture of health, and a perfect specimen of athletic physical manhood.

Dr. Tenney has published a simple truth describing his experience and telling of his wonderful discovery, which any interested person can obtain by sending a two cent stamp for postage, and we would suggest that you write to-day for this book, which tells exactly what you want to know. Address Edward Tenney, M. D., Suite 7410 Chalk Music Building, Syracuse, N.Y.

Dr. Tenney's readers in this circulating library are unanimous in saying that his book is the most interesting and valuable they have ever read, and gladly do we add our testimony. We feel sure it will gladden the heart of all about it.

QUIT WORK ON PLANT'S BIG GAME PRESERVE

OSSIPEE, N. H., Aug. 4—The work of converting the 5,000-acre mountain tract known as Ossipee Park into a great game preserve for some Boston millionaires, presumably Thomas G. Plant, the shoe manufacturer, has stopped. The small army of laborers has been paid off and sent away. Mystery surrounds the whole transaction of the buying of the property and the starting of the work. The purchase price was said to be $500,000. It is declared that Mr. Plant changed his mind about having a game preserve.

LEADING ADVERTISING EXPERTS PRAISE NEWSPAPER PUBLICITY

SPECIALTY MEN GET ADVICE FROM EXPERTS AT AD MEETING.

A movement for a permanent organization of retail advertising sales managers was set on foot at the session of the Retail Advertising Division of the Associated Advertising Clubs today in Elks' Hall.

A committee was named, which has instructions to investigate during the coming year the advisability and practicability of organizing a permanent association. At present the association is a haphazard sort of affair, according to F. W. Tully, who presided. He said:

"We should now have no real organization of this character. We just happen to have in an unofficial way, along with other interesting things, from a branch of the general advertising clubs, a bunch of men together for a talk. We think it is about time the retail advertising and sales men got together and acquire a real organization.

"There were the comments of the convention of men in the Elks' Hall on the upper floor of the Elks' Club. Accordingly, after the question had been informally discussed, a nominating committee was chosen by suggestions from the floor. They retired for a few minutes and on their return, recommended that the following men be constituted a committee to investigate the matter and report next year at the convention:

Committee Is Chosen.

The committee is: James J. Stokes of Marshall, Field & Co., Chicago; Jonas of Atlanta, Georgia; A. G. Chaney of Texas; J. L. Hunter of Bangor, F. W. Tully of Providence, and F. W. Tully of Boston.

The setting on foot of this movement was largely due to the suggestion of James J. Stokes of Chicago. But the idea was picked up eagerly by all the men present, and went through with a rush.

Another important bit of business was the naming of the men who will preside at the meeting of the association next year. Forrest H. Appel of Philadelphia, whose address on John Wanamaker was the feature of the session, was elected chairman and Benjamin S. Jacobs was named as secretary.

About 200 gathered in Elks' Hall for the session. Another session of the association had been held Wednesday and this was the closing meeting of the convention. The delegates met in Elks' Hall, roomy and well ventilated. Pipes, cigars and cigarettes were set going, and every one settled down to enjoy the thing in solid comfort.

F. W. Tully of Boston called them to order at a little after the hour set for the opening, which was half past nine. After the hearing of the minutes of the meeting Mr. Appel started his address. His paper dealt with the peculiar imagination applied to Retail Advertising. His long experience with John Wanamaker in Philadelphia qualified him to give an address which struck home to every man. They said set him thinking. It was short and the reading occupied only about half an hour. Following came a spirited discussion by the delegates present, half a dozen taking part.

Retail Organization.

There was a recess for a few minutes after this discussion, and the delegates circulated about the hall. The chairman called them to order at 11 o'clock, when the second paper was read. It was on the subject, "The New Thought in Retail Organization," and was by Charles Sale, Selling Manager of the Sales Manager's Bureau of the A. T. Stewart Company. The speaker was Fredrick W. Alfred secretary of the R. H. Gladding Dry Goods Company of Providence. The paper was short, lasting only a little over fifteen minutes, and was also discussed at some length.

The business of the meeting, including the naming of a committee on permanent organization, occupied only a few minutes, and at a little after 12 o'clock Chairman Tully declared this year's session of the Retail Advertising Men's Association closed. All the speakers were unanimous as to the benefit of secret publicity.

SPECIALTY MEN GET GOOD ADVICE FROM SPEAKERS

"Am I my Keeper's Keeper? the Responsibility of the Specialty Salesman to the Advertiser," was the subject of an address at the Specialty Advertising session of the convention today at Pilgrim Hall by L. H. Buckley of the American Cart Works of Columbus. Other speakers were L. E. Pratt of New York and Clowers Chapman of New York. Mr. Buckley said in part:

How Far Responsibility?

"In every age man has been asking this question which involves the structure of society and the growth of civilization. 'How far am I responsible for the condition of the man with whom I touch elbows in the crowded parts of life? How far shall I go in the great struggle for human existence in this brotherhood idea? How much shall I do for the other fellow?'

"To the pursuance of my business I sell the buyer of a manufacturing establishment a bill covering 10,000 signs for $5,000. I have spent days, weeks, and probably months in working up this particular design for his company. It has been back and forth several times from the advertising manager of his company to the artists of my company. Skill and time and money have not been spared upon it and at last the moment comes when I sign the order and I hold it in my hand ready to forward to my house for their part, its completion. I have done my work. I have sold him the goods; others are now to complete them and his company is to pay for them.

Not Up to Him.

"Under the ordinary laws of business I have finished my part and it is no further concern of mine, except in a general way, to know that he gets what he pays for and puts them out as he sees fit. I have sold him the goods. It is his business to know how to use them. If he does not know how he must do. I have fifty other concerns as good as his to whom I must go and work out designs and make sales if I can and I have no time to waste in a time of loss.

"Let us hear from Mr. Buyer at this point. One of my customers said to me not long since. 'Ninety-nine per cent of all the men who come here to sell me goods do not seem to care a continental whether I get value received out of what I buy of them or not. What they are after is the order and their profit in it and they consider their responsibility ended when I sign the order. Then he proceeded to outline his ideas about what he thought a real salesman should be and do to create the relations between the buyer and salesman.

"This consciousness of a co-partnership between the buyer and salesman is no idle dream of a golden age to come, but belongs to the right now of our commercial life, for I take it that the days of the man who is plainly after the order and the dollar it stands for, and cares not whether it makes or loses for the purchaser, are numbered.

Closer Companies of Interests.

"Closer Companies of interests Advertising and Sales," in speaking on the subject "Trade Marks and Unfair Competition in their Business and Legal Aspects," said in part:

"It would be hard to convince the majority of us that workers in our businessings shall see ever meet the 'Gold Dust Twins,' that nowhere shall we ever hear the old slogan, 'Say, is That Pearline What Am?' that nowhere shall we ever see the little fellow looking for 'His Master's Voice.'

Create Mental Images.

"These trade marks are because they create mental images which spring from our experiences. They set in motion those impulses which reach the human being in bottomed in every one of us. They relate the past to the present, and the present to the future. A product that is not trade-marked is like a Missouri mule—without either pride, ancestry or hope of posterity. Even a mere word, a colored word if you please, when the middle appeal enters our thought rises as an idiom like 'Cross the line,' 'Dixie' or 'Home, Sweet Home.' We were familiar.

"But the trade-mark is not offered for your consideration because of its sentimental value, but because of its commercial worth. It does, because it is never to increase your property, and by putting before the public a product of uniform satisfaction a trade mark would win to orders. It would secure more trade. It would lead the satisfied customers and the friends of satisfied purchasers to take from the shelves of dealers more shipments of your goods. It would put them in a fair trade more efficiently than the personality of competing factors more effectually than a price war, because with a trade-mark of unquestioned quality, reasonable profits, increase sales, and not have to carry the burden of competitors' secrets which you might not be able to operate in conjunction with your own."

EXPERTS TELL HOW ADVERTISING GIVES GROWTH TO CITIES

How great cities and seaside resorts have been advertised was discussed at the Municipal and State Publicity session of the convention at the Twentieth Century Club today. Thomas P. Anderson of Boston presided. The speakers were George S. Lenhart, secretary and manager of the Atlantic City Publicity Bureau, and Granville M. Hunt, chairman of convention committees, of Washington, D. C. Hunt said in part:

"Attractive, timely, truthful and catchy advertising will bring sure returns to any line of business. An example of this may be cited in the catch-line of some of our local hotels used in New York publications. 'Those who come from Atlantic City, the Boardwalk, and New Yorkers, discriminating and patronizing Atlantic City.' The Publicity Bureau of Atlantic City does not limit its work to that from the municipality. Its maintenance fund is derived from annual subscriptions by the hotels and business men.

"If competition is the life of trade, then advertising is the success of business. Business advertising embraces individuals, corporations, communities and countries and judiciously applied, has made them famous and fortunate. All advertising is good—but some of it is much better than others. Keeping constantly at it with the application of judicious methods to sure to bring success to the advertiser of worth. Newspapers and magazines are the most popular mediums agencies for publishing publicity now.

"Merchants and business men have come to a full realization of the fact that printer's ink and the 'arts preservative of arts' open the door to success," said Mr. Hunt of Washington.

"The question of municipal publicity is at the present time occupying the thoughts and energies of at least 70 per cent. of the municipalities of the United States. Never before in the history of this country has so much attention been given to the exploitation of this subject.

"The object of municipal publicity is two-fold. First, to obtain in the respective municipalities profit-paying industries, thereby increasing the volume of money in circulation in the particular community and thus increasing the profits of the individual merchant. Second, which is the result of the first, increased population.

"The first proposition, that of obtaining industries, results in the providing of employment for idle labor, thus reducing the level of eleemosynary institutions, which means funds available for the improvement of the material welfare of the community."

MESSAGE FROM THE "AD" MEN, SENT TO PRESIDENT TAFT

Hon. William H. Taft, White House, Washington, D. C.:

My Dear Mr. President—The Associated Advertising Clubs of America appreciate deeply your cordial greeting to the seventh annual convention, and while acknowledging your tribute to the marked advancement of modern advertising in our national life, we rejoice to assure you that the spirit of this convention on higher work and is an augury of still greater progress along legitimate lines of this vital branch of commercial activities. Wishing you an early and happy respite from executive cares at your Summer home, I remain, in behalf of the association, yours very sincerely,

SAMUEL C. DOBBS.

ADVERTISING MEN WIND UP BIG CONVENTION WITH BUSY DAY

"ALKALI" PETE ISN'T EVEN SALTY; IT'S JUST A REAL TEXAS HOAX WORKED ON BOSTON.

There isn't any alkali in "Alkali Pete's" makeup.

As they say down Texas way, nuuth, there ain't any "Alkali Pete." Pete has been faking. Pete's really somebody else.

Yessub, "Alkali Pete" has been posing. So has Fred McJunkin, his inseparable pal. Now their friends are exposing them. Alkali is none other than Peter Lavino Willis, manager of the biggest piano jobbing house in Texas. He ain't no ranchman attall. Though he spends his Summers at Hanover, Mass., to date he hasn't been recognized in the garb he has been wearing.

Mr. McJunkin is the proprietor of a big haberdashery in Dallas. Of course, the exposure of the pair will give the youngsters who have envied the pair since the day they struck town and began putting a good one across on Boston, a jolt.

All the boys wandered how many Indians "Pete" had made buy wild cat stock in "shootin' iron." They believed what the newspapers said, that McJunkin was a ranchman and was "Alkali Pete's" boss. Now comes the disillusionment. It's hard on the boys. But It's nice for Messrs. Willis and McJunkin. They doffed their outlandish togs to-day and put on real human being clothing, and they said they felt lots happier.

P. S.—That alkali business was an advertising stunt.

MANY SESSIONS END BUSINESS FOR THE AD MEN

Henry G. Lord of Boston presided at the session of the technical, trade and class publications session in Wigwam Hall. "Some Problems of Trade Paper Advertisers" was discussed in an excellent paper by F. R. Davis of the advertising department of the General Electric Company of Schenectady. His paper was discussed by several advertising managers of trade papers. "Co-operative Advertising Plans for Papers in the Same Class" was discussed in addresses by Dr. Edwin Lewis, president of the associated medical papers and editor of American Medicine, who spoke for the medical press; W. H. Ukers of the Tea and Coffee Trade Journal, who spoke for the associated grocers' press, and Wallace Richardson of New York, who spoke for the farm journals. The session ended with a paper by W. O. Poole of Atlanta on "Directory Advertising" which was followed by a discussion.

The general advertising agents held their departmental session in Ford Hall and men from all over the country and a few from foreign countries advertising consultants attended. Frank Presby of New York was chairman and opened the discussion.

There were no set speeches, but all those present took part in the following discussions: "A Code of Ethics for Advertising Agents," "The Standardization of Newspaper Rate Cards," "Are Newspapers Justified in Making One Rate for Local Advertisers and a Higher Rate for Foreign Advertisers?" and "The Evil of Rebating and How It Can Best Be Stopped."

"The Publisher and his Responsibility for the Sins of advertising" was the subject of general discussion at the specialties session in Chipman Hall, Tremont Temple. David G. Kenyon of New York was chairman. The subjects, "Improving the Position of the National Advertiser With the Consumer and the Trade," was discussed by William H. Ingersoll, advertising manager of Robert H. Ingersoll & Brother of New York, and Charles M. Wessels, advertising counsel of Philadelphia.

"The builder of printed business literature cannot rely upon custom; he may neither ride with the tide of that great company in commercial organization which, habitually and with success, follows custom as a model. He must, then, rely upon himself. He shall he make and how sustain his declaration of independence?

"First, by keeping always in his mind, when producing new matter, an idea of its purpose, as definite and as persistent that he becomes dominated with the spirit of the hand-to-hand contest in which the salesman wins his individual victories.

"Next, by not being afraid to do a thing nobody has ever done before. The advertiser who seeks successfully to evade the bonds of custom must be prompt to grasp opportunity. The daily incident will furnish the timely text of the unusual object lesson. John Ingalls said: 'Opportunity knocked but once.' I think he was mistaken. If he had said 'twice a day' he would have been nearer the mark. Mr. Dooley says Opportunity hammers on some men's doors till it breaks down the door, and I think that's nearer the point.

"Success is a question of being awake when opportunity arrives.

"Make your opportunity. The materials lie all around you—in every hand."

IMPORTANCE OF THE FARMER TO THE ADVERTISER

Dr William C. Burkett, editor of the American Agriculturist, spoke on "The Importance of the Farmer to the Agricultural Advertiser," at the session of the agricultural publications at Gilbert Hall today. T. W. LeQuatte of Des Moines was chairman of the meeting. Other speakers were W. A. Whitney of Spring field, G. B. Sharp and Walter D. Ross of Worcester. Mr. Burkett said in part:

"Farming is in a very prosperous condition. Farmers are happy because they are living well and they have money with which to supply their many needs. During the past year, although a general drouth prevailed, the farmers will contribute 80 per cent to the world in real wealth. This wealth, organized by sun and air and soil and water and protoplasm, will be enough to pay the entire debt of the United States to pay for the Panama canal and build a battleship for every State and Territory in the union.

"These real basis of American prosperity rests, therefore, on the value of the crops and animals of the farm. The custom, frequently indulged in of looking at high buildings that line asphalt and brick streets as the gauge of national satisfaction, success and prosperity, you can ride, road, Broadway across the continent and nowhere at all the Canadian border be reached and carry the same construction to the gulf, and in six months if agriculture be abandoned, as it necessarily would be, the buildings would be tenantless and the lands would be doing no business, and not about all the people either would be dead or starving."

EVERY MINUTE IS TIME TO SEIZE OPPORTUNITY

"Business Literature" was the subject discussed by the Printing, Engraving and Business Literature session of the convention to-day in Tremont Temple. Addresses were made by E. St. Elmo Lewis of Detroit, W. T. Frisble of Syracuse, C. R. Lippincott of New York City, W. E. Crawford of Waco, and K. L. Murray of Lincoln, Neb. Mr. Frisble said in part:

And Then You Wake Up!

The Parker Optician looks knowing and wise and sadly he signs at his opulent eyes that when you wake up you're certain to find this sight thing and squinting was only a bad dream. Step before the glasses you or three times, for a Wilson will perfect Optician, whose only limit to price is the sky. Wilson looks, the Sculpt 39, Washers, simple Pro, called optician and grind their own lenses. Prescription not necessary; bring in your broken lens; glasses repaired while you wait; a safe place to trade; open evenings.

JERRY MOORE, WORLD CHAMPION CORN GROWER

JERRY MOORE

Fifteen-year-old South Carolina lad has distinction of raising 228 bushels and three pecks of corn on one acre.

CHAMPION CORN GROWER IS HERE

With the South Carolina delegation at the Hotel Nottingham is the champion boy corn grower of the world, fifteen-year-old Jerry Moore of Florence County, S. C. The delegation is proud of Jerry and his ability to grow corn and a card heralding his abilities reads: "Florence grow Jerry and Jerry grow the corn."

Jerry has the distinction of raising 228 bushels and three pecks of corn on one acre. This is over twice as many bushels as the average highly fertile soil of the West yields.

At the Atlantic States exposition Jerry was awarded a special prize of $20 for his corn raising efforts. He also won the county prize of $20, a $40 certificate and a ton of fertilizer. The United States government board of the young boy's success and bought forty bushels of his corn at $1 a bushel. This amount was $5 more than the lad expected to receive a bushel for his product. The rest of his crop he sold for $1 a bushel, and it is expected he will make $2,000 from his farm products this year.

Twenty-eight advertising men from South Carolina are at the Hotel Nottingham, and every delegate is here to boost the State, no matter what it costs. The Southern Railway Company sent its promotion agent, J. R. Pinster, along to help make converts to the South Carolina way of thinking.

Hartwell M. Ayer, editor and manager of the Florence Daily Times, is a member of the party, making his first visit to Boston. One of the way they do things in Boston. With him is A. L. Orth, editor of the Deutsche Zeitung, also published in Florence.

SEEN AND HEARD AMONG AD MEN

Miss Gladdie de Montbrenn of Cincinnati has been officially recognized as the convention mascot. She is an exceptionally pretty miss of ten years and was formally presented to the convention at the Ford Hall meeting. She is the mascot of the Cincinnati delegation as well.

The total registration at the Hotel Lenox shows 2,500 members and guests of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America now in Boston.

H. S. Houston of New York presented a resolution at the Ford Hall meeting commending the action of the Billboard Advertising Association in forbidding the display of indecent posters on any board in the United States owned by members of that association. He estimated that this action of the billposters would mean a loss to them of $1,250,000 a year.

Singing by the Knickerbocker Male Quartet was a fine feature of the Ford Hall meeting. The quartet sang several selections and would have to render "one more" for the mass of unsatisfied business.

H. T. Meredith, publisher of an Iowa farm paper, was presented a handsome loving cup by the Iowa delegation at the session in Ford Hall. It was in recognition of his great work in promoting clean advertising in the middle West.

The St. Louis advertising men's quartet, Glenn Eastman, Wallace Goldingham, Jack Collins and Ted Westlake, were the sweet singers at the clambake. They were encored repeatedly after every selection.

NEBRASKA HERE WITH BELLS ON

"King Korn" and his bride, "Queen Korn," with about twenty attendants, was the central figure in the Nebraska demonstration, when a hundred business men residing Nebraska carnation formed headquarters in the Boston Opera House.

F. A. Scheringer, a Nebraska delegate, wore a lightdown, on which is printed a large ear of corn, yellow kernels and the words "Corn as King." Scheringer led the parade. The Nebraskans wore white felt hats with red, green and yellow ear bands—the colors of Nebraska. On the hat bands is "Ak-sar-ben," a Nebraska spelling backwards. Ak-sar-ben is the name of a breed of Jerseys in Omaha made up of business men.

King Korn brought greetings to Bostonians from the great young State of Nebraska, a territory which produces more wealth than all the gold mines in Alaska and the United States.

Clean-up

At 14 & 16 Summer St.

We Must Vacate Sept. 1st

IF it were not for the seriousness of our predicament in being forced to dispose of our vast stock in 24 days, the present prices would be absolutely ridiculous. Never in the history of Boston have such superb clothes as these thousands of GEORGES MODEL GARMENTS been sold at such a desperate sacrifice. Doesn't matter how little or how much you can afford to pay or what your tastes may be—this is the biggest clothes opportunity you ever encountered.

WE SHALL STAY IN BOSTON

This is one of our most successful stores, we could not afford to leave Boston, the reason we have not yet announced a new location is because landlords have been boosting rents. But we are now "dickering" on the lease for a prominent site, which will probably be announced next week.

AMATEURS BIG HELP TO BOXING

By KNOCKOUT.

There will be boiling galore at the annual scrap tournament of the Central A. A. tonight. Over thirty bouts will be run off before the evening's festivities come to an end. Some of the bouts will be between the best mitt dispensers outside of the professional ranks.

Great interest is being manifested in the welterweight class. Just how many of these pugs will be prominent welterweights around Boston. As a result of the lack of good welterweights, a large number of budding youngsters have entered in this class, for they know that if they can come across with the good they will be given a chance to work in the professional field the coming season.

Boston has always been one of the leading cities in the country when it has come to supporting amateur boxing. The great demand for tickets for tonight's show seems to indicate that the good work will be continued and that a record crowd will turn out to see the bouts at the Symphony games.

The future of professional boxing depends to no small measure upon the development of the amateur. Every time an amateur shows that are held the more enthusiastic supporters will be found flocking into the big ring every season.

Twenty-one different species of "white hopes," ranging all the way from 150 to 250 pounds in weight, will compete in the boxing tournament for honors which will be held to take place at the Twentieth Century Club in New York, commencing at 8 o'clock this evening. The affair will be a jolly scuffle, too, which will be followed up for the entertainment of Gotham's fistic fans. The greater number of the fighting fanatics who will take part in the grand search for a "hope" do not know the least thing about scientific boxing, but many of them are either boss men of a grocery wagon or inclined to take a few hours off from looking after the affairs of the office to show their prowess in the ring. And New York sports are going to get a great United States money to see the bouts. Well, what's the use of spending all your money for a thing you don't like? The promoters have to get a living some way!

Mr. William Papke of Illinois is scheduled to blow into New York today. William has two reasons for coming to New York. His first reason is to start training for one more battle, and his second reason is for one of the principals. His second reason is in front of the big Fifth Klans, who is to meet "Cyclone Johnny" Thompson of the Bronx at Madison Square on August 17. Papke has a wholesome respect for this young middleweight from the City of Smoke, and with reason, too, for the Pittsburg fighter has been one of the most consistent boxers in the game. Papke does not take a great deal about being cyclone Johnny" about being cyclone Johnny" about being cyclone Johnny"

RED SOX VICTORY MEANS TIGERS' FALL

By R. W. LARDNER.

It is hardly possible that the Red Sox and Tigers can give a prettier exhibition of baseball than that of yesterday, when Detroit went down to its third straight defeat, 3 to 2, in twelve innings. But the two clubs will be out there again to-day batting for the fourth game of the series, and the folks who pay their way in will know that they are going to get their money's worth, whichever club wins.

The Tigers are hanging onto first place by the narrowest of margins. Defeat today will surely drop them down a peg, for the Athletics won't lose both ends of their double-header with the Browns. Even if the Detroit boys win, they will probably be forced out of first place, because the champions are likely to trim St. Louis twice.

Fans Will Forgive All.

If the Red Sox can turn the trick again the fans will forget all about those four straight beatings out in Detroit and there'll be a crowd on hand to-morrow that will make Wednesday's lack comparatively small.

A couple of years ago, the late Stanley Robison, president of the St. Louis Nationals, sprang a new one by getting the life of his manager and star catcher, Roger Bresnahan, insured. Roger was drawing a big salary and "Stan" didn't want to suffer a total loss if anything happened to the "Duke." Now Bill Carrigan isn't manager of the Red Sox, but he is drawing a pretty good salary. Let us suppose to John I. that the club starting premiums on a policy for Bill.

Mr. Carrigan takes his life in his hands, and in all the rest of his body, every day he catches. In his long career, almost entirely when Joe Wood is pitching, for Joe doesn't often let opponents get around the bases far enough to endanger Bill's life by close plays at the plate. No catcher was ever known to die by getting his hands knocked off, so Bill is probably safer when he is pitching than at other times.

But Mr. Carrigan appears to think less of his body than of having a runner at the plate. It would probably break his heart if he got the ball ahead of a runner and then failed to gain the decision over said runner. Bill is about as much afraid of spikes as Bob Hedges is of being called to accommodate a Tuesday crowd at his park in St. Louis.

Hides the Home Plate.

The demon Sox catcher has his own plan of preventing opponents from scoring. He hides the plate entirely from their view. The instant the ball is safely cored in his hands, he plants his large body directly in the path and says "Come on." The body is so large that the runner has to fall on his opponent before he can see where the plate is. He can't see it. This takes him mind and he slides into Bill about as gently as a switch engine strikes a sleeping car down South.

Bill doesn't budge. He lies there calmly until he can get his hands on the umpire's favorable verdict, picks up his fractured body, and after answering the remarks that are invariably addressed to him by the surprised and angered person who failed to score, he gets ready for further operations.

Now, this isn't a prediction that Bill will get killed, nor is it a idea that he isn't perfectly able to take care of himself. It is merely a statement of the fact that Carrigan takes more chances than any other catcher in the game, that there are certain members of opposing teams likely to approve of his absolute fearlessness, and that several of them have openly threatened to "get him."

Bill Has His Enemies.

There is not the friendliest feeling in the world between Bill and George Moriarty of the Tigers, nor between Bill and Sam Crawford. The Detroit captain, Mr. Moriarty, objects to having his view of the plate shut off. He felt that about it in the recent series in Detroit. Cross words were exchanged and there were fire threats on both sides.

Mr. Crawford was cut down in a close play at the plate in the sixth inning of Wednesday's first game. Bill didn't give him an inch of room and Sam lost his temper, which is nothing unusual for him. The two faithfully promised to "get" each other, and the fulfillment of the promise will be worth going to see. Sam is a muscular proposition and Bill must be hard, or he couldn't stand jumping he gets.

But the games with Detroit are interesting enough without bloodshed, so let us hope that the "get" is saved for less exciting times. Meanwhile, Bill continues to stop the ball with his hands, and the runner with any part of his body that comes in handy.

Jack Gleason may not want to take any stock in the Hustlers as fast as usual, but it's a cinch he would buy into the Detroit club if he had the chance, and why not? If the Tigers drew half as well at home as they do on foreign grounds, or if their home were Philadelphia, New York, Chicago, St. Louis or Boston, instead of Detroit, Frank Navin would be so busy counting money that he couldn't eat.

NEW YORK Y. C. ON BIG CRUISE

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—One of the largest sailing fleets that has gone eastward under the red-pressed blue pennant of the New York Yacht Club put out of Glen Cove, Long Island, at mid-afternoon to-day on the annual cruise that will take the fleet to New Haven, New London, New Bedford and Newport.

The fleet began to assemble yesterday, when some of the Boston yachts, the schooners Emerald, owned by F. Lewis Clark, commodore of the Eastern Yacht Club; Tarantula, owned by William S. Eaton, and the sloop Adventuress, owned by C. C. Rumrill, reached this end of the Sound.

NEW WHITE HOPE IS KNOCKED OUT

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—The one regret of Big Tom Kennedy to-day is that he did not accept the $10,000 offered him by his wealthy father three years ago to keep away from the prize ring.

Kennedy tried to break into the ranks of the professional pugilists last night at the National Sporting Club, but was knocked out in the ninth inning by Al Palzer, a husky heavyweight and the protege of Tom O'Rourke of the club. Kennedy battled gamely, but lacked science and Palzer gradually wore him down.

Palzer rushed on Kennedy as soon as the bell tapped for the opening round and never let up.

PERRY LEADS ALL THE WAY: GETS DRAW

ADAMS, Aug. 4.—George Perry of Boston met Cyclone Johnny Thomas of Troy in a ten-round bout here. The referee decision was a draw, but it was Perry's bout from the start. Perry forced the fighting all the way and deserved to win. Perry went on in Gerry's place, who was jailed, but called the fight off.

In the semi-final Kid Casey of Adams and Ike Moran of Albany, N. Y., went six fast rounds to a draw and gave one of the best seconds numbers the club has put on. Both boys showed ability and considerable knowledge of the game. Young Peter of Adams and Young Lamarque of Adams went four rounds to a draw in the preliminary.

WILL ASK COURT TO DEPOSE DOWD

NEW BEDFORD, Aug. 4.—With Tom Dowd, the recently deposed manager, still in the city and with James W. Sullivan, the new manager, refusing to "dabble" in the matter because he is a friend of Dowd, the baseball war between the New Bedford Baseball Club officers and the deposed manager is at a standstill and there will probably be no further developments until action is taken on the petition for an injunction to be asked from the Superior Court.

Dowd was on the players' bench in uniform at the New Bedford-Brockton game. Umpire Horty received orders from President Mahan of the league to the effect that Dowd was no longer manager of the local club, but despite this the umpire refused to order the former club leader from the grounds.

In company with his attorney, E. T. Hanning, Dowd visited the Third District Court here in an effort to get a warrant charging that they obtained a receipt from him under false pretenses. This warrant was refused because of the lack of evidence.

Sullivan, the new manager and former scout for the New York Americans, watched yesterday's game from the grandstand.

BOSTON TOURISTS' ADVENTURES IN HAMBURG.

Mr. P. McIsaac, the AMERICAN'S special representative with the Chamber of Commerce party in Europe, has sent home a most entertaining article telling what the party in general, and Manager Fitzgerald in particular, did in the famous European city. The story will appear in the Editorial section of next Sunday's AMERICAN.

Don't Worry, Mike

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"IT'S tough in Boston," the rooter said, "It's a great town, Mike, but, as the dead,
The American League has got the call
Because they've been playing better ball.
Since the days of Collins the Boston crowd
Has rooted long and has rooted loud
For the Johnson circuit, and so I fear
You'll lose out as a National many year."
But Mike just smiled and shook his head:
"You'll have to talk to the wife," he said.

"Y Oh see, Mrs. Doolin," the rooter exclaimed, "over in New York, where Mike was trained,
The fans all know he's the swatting kid—
They raised the roof when he batted or slid."
This was 'Oh, you Mike!' when he came to bat,
From peanut boy to aristocrat;
And I'm only afraid he will get the frown,
The way things are in Boston town."
Quoth petite little Mabel, "Don't you care—
My Mike would be popular anywhere."

M'NAMARA TO REFEREE.

BOOB NELSON'S DETECTIVE WHO IS WORKING ON THE GEORGE WASHINGTON KIDNAPPING CASE INTERRUPTS A CONVERSATION WITH A STARTLING PIECE OF ABDUS.

"George Washington," "Boob" Nelson's Giants, who offered his services as a detective to "Boob," is at work on the case of having something to do with the mysterious disappearance of "Boob's" pet. According to Rattles, the kidnaping was the result of a big plot and there is no telling how many kids were concerned in it. Rattles would have had "Eaglebeak" arrested yesterday but for the fact that he first wants to locate the hiding place of George. As soon as that is done, the recovery of him will be easy, says the detectives, according to "Boob," he knows what he is talking about.

Rattles was still on the track of "Eaglebeak" when we went to press. "Eaglebeak" was leading him quite a chase, but the detective stuck to the job like a regular one.

When we left home, Rattles had counted seventeen flies that "Eaglebeak" had captured and put in a brown paper bag which he was carrying. This collection of flies is supposed to be to feed "George Washington." When the feeding takes place Rattles will be somewhere around. Probably he will be disguised as no one will recognize him, but he will be there just the same, so he says.

There will be another game between the Starfish Giants and the Umpertines this afternoon. As usual, we will be there and do our best to describe it for to-morrow's paper.

Exaggerated

She had been at the seaside and in the country and her industrious fiance had been working and waiting for her during the long, long days. Now she had returned, and he had been hearing many things of her, and was sore displeased.

"They tell me," he said, painfully, "that you flirted desperately with no fewer than six men."

Her cheeks flushed and her eyes blazed. "Who told you that?" she asked, angrily.

"Several people.—It has been common talk."

Her anger gave way to sobs. "Oh, Frank," she pleaded, as she flung herself on his neck, "it isn't true—it isn't true."

A great load was lifted from his heart. "No, Frank," she went on, "it isn't true; there were only four."

"I KNOW what you would like to say, I think," said Sir Ian, very gently.

"She left no will, but if she had dreamed that—she might so suddenly, she would have wished to leave a legacy to you. You must let me——"

Suddenly the girl looked up, her blue eyes dark and bright. "Don't!" she broke out. "Don't, Sir Ian. It's no use. I couldn't possibly take one penny from you."

"It wouldn't be from me," he argued. "She——"

"All the same, I can't take it," Nora repeated.

"But let me persuade you—"

"I tell you I would rather die!"

He stared at her in pained amusement. She looked hard and desperate. He had never seen the beautiful young creature in such a mood. But she had gone through a great deal. No wonder her nerves were strained almost to the breaking point.

"You used to like and trust me a little, I thought," he said.

"Used! Oh, Sir Ian, please go, and leave me, before I say anything which I shall regret all my life—and you will regret too."

He looked at the girl strangely, in silence. Then, a light as of comprehension, flashed into his eyes, and his face reddened deeply.

"Good-by, Miss Verney, "he said. And as if on a sudden thought, he held out his hand. "If I come back here it will be only for the longest. Otherwise I may be gone a long time. Will you shake hands?"

Began to Sob

Impulsively, she put both hers behind her, twisting the small, cold fingers together. Then, turning her shoulder to him, she covered her face with her hands and began to sob.

Without another word, Sir Ian went out, and shut the door behind him. He had forgotten all about his hostess, and would have left the house without seeing her if she had not caught sight of him passing the half-open door of the study where she sat with her husband. Instantly she pounced upon him, with the beaming smile which was intended to "cheer him up."

"Well?" she said. "I hope you had a satisfactory little chat with that poor dear child?"

"She is very proud," Sir Ian answered bee disappointed, for Maud stopped her coachman instantly.

"Oh, Sir Ian," she said, "I'm so glad to see you. Have you heard from Norman?"

"Yes," he returned. "He wrote me a good letter, I haven't answered it yet, but I will."

"He won't expect that. No one does expect answers—to such letters. Is it true that you are going away?"

"Yes," said Sir Ian.

"Will you be gone many weeks?"

"I don't know," he said. And then his eyes met Terry's. In a long gaze, which seemed to say something which she yearned to understand, yet could not. It was as if he could not look away; but at last he turned his bent his eyes to the ground, and stood, prodding the grass with the ash stick he carried.

To Be Continued To-morrow

"The Vanity Box" is running serially in the daily and Sunday AMERICAN. A liberal instalment of this remarkable mystery novel will be printed in the Sunday AMERICAN.

Held His Head High

Again Mrs. Haynes quite understood and sympathized. She was sure that a chance would do Sir Ian worlds of good, but she hoped that it might not be so very long before he felt able to come back to live in his own home and to the friends who had never valued him more than they did to-day.

"I don't know—I don't know," said Sir Ian. "Just now, I feel as if—I could never think of Friars' Mead as home again. But perhaps some time——" he broke off, and held out his hand. "Good-bye. Good-bye to you both. I will write—about Miss Verney—before night."

Out of doors he walked with his head held high, as of old, but there was an unseeing look in his eyes. The brown soldier face was leaner and less brown than it had been a week ago. Certainly he needed a change.

The vicarage was on the outskirts of the village, far back from the road. As through the meadow into which brook it through the meadow into which the gate opened, and before reaching the lawns and gardens which surrounded the pretty, low-built old house, pedestrians and carriages had to cross a rustic bridge.

Sir Ian was on foot, and as he neared the bridge, he was obliged to step aside for an approaching victoria. When he saw that Maud Ricardo and Terry were in it, he stood with his hat off, pale and unsmiling.

If he had hoped that the two ladies would pass on with a bow, As most have

"BE not attached." So runs the great command
For those who seek to "know" and "understand,"
Who sounds the waters of the deeper sea
Must first draw up his anchor and go free.

But not for me, that knowledge. I must wait.
Until again I enter thro' earth's gate.
I am not brave enough to sail away
To farther seas and leave this beauteous bay.

Love-barnacled, my anchor lies, and oh,
I would not lift it if I could and go
All unattached, to find those truths which lie
Far out at sea beneath a lonely sky.

Though peace of heart and happiness of soul
Await the seeker at that farther goal,
With love and all its rapture and its pain,
Close to the shores of earth I must remain.

Nor yet would I relinquish my sweet dream
To gain possession of the Fact supreme.
I am attached, and well content to stay,
Learning such truths as love may send my way.

Don't Hide Them With a Veil; Remove Them With the New Drug

An eminent skin specialist recently discovered a new drug, othine—double strength, which is so uniformly successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion, that is sold by Houghton & Dutton or Riker-Jaynes Drug Co., under an absolute guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of othine and remove them. Even the first night's use will show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely. It is absolutely harmless, and cannot injure the most tender skin.

Be sure to ask Houghton & Dutton or Riker-Jaynes Drug Co. for the double-strength othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.

DON'T DIE IN THE HOUSE.

As to the use of the phrase "Don't Die in the House" in connection with advertisements of Rough on Rats—we mean that this is the rule and our own personal experience, and in its sale in immense quantities all over the world, nearly 40 years, we have never heard of but 5 or 6 cases where it was claimed a rat had died in the house after use of Rough on Rats, and these reports were never confirmed.

After eating Rough on Rats, thirst is created, and it is assumed Rats go outside in search of water and never get back, else are fearful to go back where they got the poison, but we cannot guarantee that no rat will ever die in the house. "2. S. Wells, Jersey City, N. J.

TAKE NO CHANCES.

You have a right to suspect the motives of one who offers a substitute for an established article. The dealer may have an interest in, or a greater profit in the said to be "just as good,"—anyway, "just as good" means taking chances, that you don't want. Rough on Rats is no experiment, known all over the world as the Unbeatable Exterminator. It is one of the things that has made good. When you give up your money you have a right to get value received in a certainty. Rough on Rats is equally as effective for Mice, Roaches, Ants, Bed Bugs, Flies, Prairie Dogs and other vermin.

Poor Claude! Bound fast to the plank and swinging rapidly toward the waiting lions, the hero finds that he does not have his usual courage. If death comes, he will not run from it like a coward, but Rosamond must see that he dies the death of a brave man and not have the stigma of having loved a coward. Of course, a hero dies only once, but permanently as a coward, that's another thing

Frightful as is his predicament, Claude, the hero that he is, does not lose his head. He sees that the only chance of escape is to jump off the swing, of death, which is now coming through the air. Should he succeed in doing this, he would be saved from the fatal spike, and the lions, bounding land upon the baffled Wild Man with a terrific impact. It is plausible, although not likely, that Claude may intend to let that's all he can do for

What do we see in the picture above? An elephant, apparently about to interrupt the swing, of death. The sagacious animal is not doing this, however, but is merely trying to give a little assistance to Claude, who, he knows, is in a bad way. Jumbo has had previous contact with his tips and is therefore not averse to helping the hero out of his difficulty. Jumbo is a good friend of Claude's, and he will do all he can to help him out of his present predicament

As the lions leave the cage, Claude, with the swing of death, which is now coming through the air, should be saved from the fatal spike, and the lions, bounding land upon the baffled Wild Man with a terrific impact. It is plausible, although not likely, that Claude may intend to let that's all he can do for

A mad loop-the-loop stunt and Claude is safe. Inside with Chief Goretz are the spikes that were to have killed him. The black villain smirks exultantly as he sees his victim escape from death and intends to be present when the lions devour him. But, alas for the villain, he is the one who is doomed to be devoured by the lions, for Claude, as he has escaped from Little Philip, and we have an idea that he will return to Rosamond in time to save her from a fate worse than death

In the hero's arms Desperate Desmond, as he runs like a cur. As you will notice from the picture below, Rosamond has escaped from Little Philip, and we have an idea that he will return to Rosamond in time to save her from a fate worse than death

Husbands as Assets

By DOROTHY DIX

"Well," said Mrs. Billings as she seated herself on another one of the benches in the park, "I see by the papers that Madame Lamos has got the title of that Mr. Morgenthau to whom she has been paying thousand dollars for lessons in how to entertain him.

"I'll bet a good deal of money that Madame Lamos couldn't teach me anything in the entertaining line that I don't know already, and I'll bet she doesn't charge me a big price for it, either.

"I'll bet I could give her a few points on how to keep husbands from straying from the domestic fold. I'll bet she doesn't know as much as I do about managing men.

"Women are starting much sense at schools nowadays if you see them setting their caps for husbands instead of for careers. And I'll bet you a dollar to a doughnut that when it comes to showing off to advantage in the matrimonial market I can beat the most accomplished hetaira that ever was graduated from a high school.

"Why, I've studied my husband for years and years, and I know his every weakness and his every strength, and I've played on him as a skilful musician plays on a violin, and I've got him so that he dances to any tune I choose to play.

"I'll bet I've got more real power over my husband than Madame Lamos will ever have over Mr. Morgenthau, and I've had to work harder for it, too, because my husband is a man of much more character than Mr. Morgenthau appears to be

PROVINCETOWN FLEET SAILS

PROVINCETOWN, Aug. 4.—The big fleet of battleships, with boats and marines and attending craft which have been at manoeuvres in Cape Cod Bay and vicinity, finished today the over-sea phase of the problem of repelling an invasion. The first of torpedo boats and destroyers left this harbor at 8 o'clock for Boston. The Cruiser, parent ship of the submarines, leading the tender Severn, got away for Gloucester about the same time. The first division, ships, the battleships, Michigan and Delaware, left for Newport, and the second division, ships, the Vermont, Kansas, New Hampshire and South Carolina, for Salem.

Although any day on the ships is not until Sunday the men will probably be paid off as soon as they reach port. No that the first and second watches will have a chance to enjoy themselves before their return here on Monday for review.

There is chagrin here among the shopkeepers, as they see the big trade slip away from them. Many of the officers, both third and fourth division battleships here, are over the liberty.

There were no fleet attacks last night, but the fifth and fourth divisions battleships repulsed in the day and continued practice today. Another of the night trials this morning under the direction of the officers of the United States Board of Inspection.

ANNA GOULD'S SINGULAR SEVENTY-HOUR TRIUMPH.

The inside Story of how Jay Gould's youngest daughter, after years of misery and cruel neglect, came up with her spendthrift life, saved her money, commanded a duchy and has settled down to enjoy a big family of little German subjects is prophesied will make a magazine article in the magazine section of next Sunday's AMERICAN.

IRISH M. P.'S ASTOR GUESTS

LONDON, Aug. 4.—The Irish members of the House of Commons have made Mrs. Nannie Langhorne Astor, the beautiful young wife of Waldorf Astor, one of them, honorary member. They sent up the Thames the other day on their annual outing and were invited to Mr. Astor to eat their luncheon in his cabin, some at a time, one of the most charming places along the river.

Luncheon had just come to a close when Mrs. Astor came up in a pony cart. As she sprang from her seat and looked about her she commented:

"Why, there's Mr. Redmond; I want to shake hands with Redmond."

Shakes Hands With Redmond.

John Redmond stepped forward with a smile and interesting remark. The others of the party gathered around in front of their hostess and were introduced. With characteristic courtesy and tact Mrs. Astor greeted each visitor as he was presented, but she broke with Mr. Redmond and Mrs. Astor:

"Mr. Redmond, I don't know you were going to be here, but when I saw you coming up the river I said to myself that I really must do something to show you how much I like you should and so I made up my mind to have you elected honorary member of the party."

Chairman Redmond protested that the honor was entirely unmerited, but the others insisted that he should be elected by acclamation and Mrs. Astor stepped into the cart and declared him duly elected. Mrs. Astor said:

"I don't think it right that one should be driven here when those less fortunate cannot. I know that I'm talking about when I say that I'm glad to be here, and although I am an American I feel that I am one of you."

Then the party got back into the boats and went on up the river, the members entertained their hostess that the money, pretend to be unwilling to take it for my country's good — whether you get your rotten old Home Rule or not. You should have it if you want it, but what I can't stand for any longer is Irishmen who tell you they are Home Rulers and would sell you out for a few dollars. They could be bought for a song."

Mrs. Astor was steady in the London season and was conspicuously strolling in them was professional Canadian Pacific was strong.

EDNA GOODRICH A "CHRONOLOGICAL INCIDENT," ONLY

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 4.—Edna Goodrich is merely a chronological incident in the matrimonial career of Nat C. Goodwin, actor, mining promoter and Cupid's man Friday. When he was informed that his fourth and last wife was about to start proceedings to prevent the publication of that much press-agented book of the actor's, Nat laughed.

"Why, that's a joke," Miss Goodrich is putting too high an estimate on the part she played in my life. Her name will not appear in my book at all, save of course, chronologically—in due and proper sequence at end of my manifold experiences. She seems to fear that I am going to publish her letters to me sent during our courtship and after our wedding. She would, if she stooped to think, know better than to harbor any such fear. I am a gentleman."

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

STEEL COMMON STOCK FEATURE

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—Steel common and Canadian Pacific shared positions as market features at the opening of the stock exchange today, although the whole list was stronger than yesterday. Steel opened with a gain of about half a point, although the absorption could not cause the heavy blocks cast upon the market, with the result that there were recessions which affected a number of others. Canadian Pacific showed an initial gain of ¼ upon good buying, both here and in London.

Strength in London was bolstered by a favorable report of earnings and when the market opened here many buying orders which had been cabled from abroad executed.

Strength in London was induced by a favorable report of earnings, and when the market opened here many buying orders which had been cabled from abroad, swelled it. Amalgamated Copper opened unchanged. The following were among the changes in the first sales:

Smelting ½, Reading ⅛, Erie ⅛, Brooklyn Rapid Transit ⅛, Union Pacific ⅜, Southern Railway ⅛.

The stock market opened irregular with Standard Oil five points higher and American Tobacco five points off.

Americans were steady in the London market, especially after reading of the strength in Canadian Pacific.

The fact that neither the Oil nor the Tobacco company has given its stockholders any official statement proving the value of their holdings is causing wholesale liquidation by the little people. Nothing will quiet the feeling of alarm that has been created, but official statements giving the true value in money of the Standard Oil and American Tobacco stocks. That will be the only way for the Standard Oil people to prove themselves innocent of the mysterious beer campaign now in progress.

The constant decline of those two stocks is demoralizing the whole market, and it is giving the impression that the big insiders are at their debut in the fight with the people. They are planning to exercise in the full limit of their legal rights as individuals, the privileges of corporations. Even the Morgan people, however much they may suspect, are standard Oil influences is behind the publication of the $2,000 fine for each count. At the hearing in the Federal Court today the attorneys for Ogden put in no defense.

Mr. Schley has put himself in an awkward position, for either he or Judge Gary must be completely discredited in the coal regarding the Steel Corporation's affairs. Gary is diversified, that means a check to the Standard Oil to the loose and fast dealing of the Steel Trust, and that means the destruction of a cornerstone of the bull campaign. The Steel Trust has dealt with the public with fairness, treating it as an equal. If its officers prove unworthy of belief the campaign politicians will be greatly strengthened.

The copper market continues dull and prospects of a favorable statement for July, to be made public early next week, have not induced purchases by consumers. According to the General Electric, Westinghouse Electric and Allis-Chalmers companies, there has been a falling off in business recently, which is taken to consumers as meaning there will be a shrinkage in consumption. This is held responsible to a large extent for the indifference of consumers to the favorable July figures of shipments. The producers are selling agencies continue to quote 12¾ cents a pound for electrolytic.

It is rumored that the United States Steel interests expect the number of 4 few months a substantial reduction in the rates on raw material to mills. It is said this will be productive of a saving of millions of dollars annually in transportation charges. This will show not only in the price of the Steel Corporation's securities, but will be of benefit to the consumer as well.

Figuring up the results for the fiscal year, it is seen that the business of the Southern Pacific amounted to $122,620,500. This represents a gain of $7,620,000, as compared with the previous year, but when it is remembered that business was more than $12,000,000 ahead of 1909 and nearly $20,000,000 ahead of the 1908 year, the situation should be viewed with considerable satisfaction.

There are many people in the Street who believe that Atchison ought to sell higher than it does, they would like to see it go higher than it does, they would like to see it go higher than it does, they would like to see it go

Ordinances of 1911, Chapter 7
Concerning
CARE OF SHADE TREES

In the Year One Thousand Nine Hundred and Eleven.

AN ORDINANCE.

Section 1.—The Public Grounds Department shall be under the charge of the Superintendent of Public Grounds, who shall have the care and superintendence of all the public grounds and shall plant and preserve the trees in the streets, and shall have the charge of the planting and preserving of trees in the streets of the City of Boston except as otherwise provided by law or ordinance. He shall have the public parks, including the park to plant new trees and shall cut down trees that shall be dead or in such condition as to endanger the public safety. He shall have the care of the streets, lanes, squares and public grounds laid out or to be laid out, and of the trees, plants and shrubbery therein, and shall cause the same to be kept in order and protected from injury. He shall have the direction and control of the planting and removal of trees, plants and shrubs in the streets, lanes, squares and public grounds, and shall from time to time recommend to the Mayor and City Council such measures as he may deem expedient for the protection of trees, plants and shrubs in the streets, lanes, squares and public grounds, and for the introduction of new trees, plants and shrubs. No person shall plant any tree, plant or shrub in any street, lane, square or public ground, except under the direction of the Superintendent of Public Grounds, and no person shall remove any trees setting forth the conditions under which such trees, plants or shrubs are to be planted, including the kind and variety thereof, and until the applicant for such permit shall have given a bond to the proper City authority, approved by the Superintendent of Public Grounds, in such sum as he may require, conditioned for the faithful performance of the work of planting the trees, plants or shrubs in accordance with the terms of the permit. The Superintendent of Public Grounds or his assistants, shall have the power to enter upon any land for the purpose of examining or trimming any tree or shrub, or any insect in connection with the work of any person licensed to trim trees, and may order the trimming of any tree or shrub in such case and manner as he may deem necessary, and such trimming shall be done except in cases of emergency, between the first day of April and the first day of November, inclusive. No person shall fasten any horse or other animal to any tree in any street, or shall injure any tree, plant or shrub in any street; nor shall any person, except in case of fire or by authority of law, climb any tree, nor break or injure any tree, plant or shrub by fire or otherwise, or in any manner to cut, break or injure any of the branches or roots thereof, or to injure the soil in any manner about any tree, plant or shrub in any street, nor shall any person remove, injure or destroy any label affixed to any tree, plant or shrub by any officer of the City of Boston, nor shall any person pick, pluck or shake down or forcibly remove any fruit, flowers or leaves from any tree, plant or shrub in any street without written permit from the Superintendent of Public Grounds, place or cause to be placed any sign, notice or fence upon any tree, plant or shrub in any street, or attach any rope or wire thereto, or use any tree as a support for any scaffold or other purpose, or place any building material or other material or thing around any tree, plant or shrub in any street in such manner as to prevent the proper growth thereof, or allow any gaseous, mineral, or other deleterious matter to come in contact with any tree, plant or shrub in any street, or allow any wire charged with electricity to come in contact with any tree, plant or shrub in any street, or allow any drain or pipe to empty or leak in such manner as to injure any tree, plant or shrub in any street, or dig any trench, tunnel or excavation in any street in such manner as to injure any tree, plant or shrub in any street, or allow any steam or hot water pipe or mains which may be laid in any street to remain in such condition as to injure any tree, plant or shrub in any street, or in the event that any such pipe or main shall be laid in any street, to refuse or neglect to repair the same so as to prevent injury to any tree, plant or shrub in any street, or allow any sewer, drain or pipe which may be laid in any street to remain in such condition as to injure any tree, plant or shrub in any street, or in the event that any such sewer, drain or pipe shall be laid in any street, to refuse or neglect to repair the same so as to prevent injury to any tree, plant or shrub in any street, or allow any electric wire or apparatus which may be laid in any street to remain in such condition as to injure any tree, plant or shrub in any street, or in the event that any such electric wire or apparatus shall be laid in any street, to refuse or neglect to repair the same so as to prevent injury to any tree, plant or shrub in any street, or allow any illuminating or operating gas pipes or mains which may be laid in any street to remain in such condition as to injure any tree, plant or shrub in any street, or in the event that any such gas pipes or mains shall be laid in any street, to refuse or neglect to repair the same so as to prevent injury to any tree, plant or shrub in any street, or allow any steam roller, stone, gravel, lime, cement or other heavy material to be placed in any street in such manner as to injure any tree, plant or shrub in any street, or in the removal of stone, cement or other material from any street, to refuse or neglect to remove the same in such manner as to prevent injury to any tree, plant or shrub in any street, or allow any tree, plant or shrub in any street to be injured in any way interfere, or allow any tree, plant or shrub in any street to grow in a stunted, misshapen or unhealthy condition, or to refuse or neglect to trim or shorten in any tree, plant or shrub in any street, or to refuse or neglect to remove any dead tree, plant or shrub in any street, or to refuse or neglect to remove any tree, plant or shrub in any street which may be ordered removed by the Superintendent of Public Grounds, or to refuse or neglect to comply with any written order of the Superintendent of Public Grounds relative to the planting, trimming, removal or protection of any tree, plant or shrub in any street, or to refuse or neglect to comply with any of the provisions of this ordinance relative to the duties of persons licensed to trim trees, or to refuse or neglect to comply with any of the terms of any permit granted by the Superintendent of Public Grounds, or to refuse or neglect to comply with any of the terms of any bond given by any person licensed to trim trees, or to refuse or neglect to comply with any of the terms of any bond given by any person licensed to plant trees, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding thirty dollars. Sect. 12. The word "trees" as used in this ordinance shall be construed to mean trees having a diameter of four inches or more at a point four feet above the ground, and the word "shrubs" shall be construed to mean shrubs, individuals, trees and compositions. Wall Street and the Stock Exchanges represent two things. Some of the Stock Exchange houses mix the two things; others, less numerous, keep them distinct.

The Stock Exchanges render a great public service to commerce, industry and all business by providing constantly the ready market for securities that is essential to business.

The second thing that the Stock Exchanges do is to maintain gigantic gambling houses that ruin thousands of business men, create innumerable defaulters, forgers and thieves of all kinds, bring poverty to many families and do much to demoralize business.

The man who calls a Stock Exchange a gambling institution pure and simple is foolish, and he libels the large class of conscientious Stock Exchange firms that do a legitimate business.

The man who denies that the Stock Exchanges promote gambling or that they should be kept under supervision by the authorities as regards their harmful gambling branches is also foolish.

There should be enough wisdom in the public, in the prosecuting officials, and in the better class of Stock Exchange men to fight against and eventually to eliminate the criminal gambling feature of the Exchanges, while protecting and developing the institutions which are as necessary to the circulation and distribution of stocks, bonds and securities of incorporated industries as the heart is necessary to the distribution of the blood.

So much for the character of the Stock Exchanges, for the foolish talk about their being mere gambling concerns, and the equally foolish assertion that they are strictly, in their entire membership, a creditable business enterprise.

Our intention to-day is to warn the public against the growing body of dishonest Wall Street "tipsters" that make a living by encouraging gambling.

Some of these have high-sounding banking titles on their printed matter. They call themselves students of the market, financial advisers, etc. They are in reality fishing for gudgeons, they are arrant rogues and cheats, and we propose to explain to you how they operate to swindle the public and fatten their own purses by tempting men and women into gambling operations.

You get a letter from such a firm of swindlers and gambling promoters advising you that a certain stock is going up or going down. In a short time they write you a letter reminding you that the stock actually did go up or go down. And they tell you quite truthfully that if you had taken their advice and invested one or five or ten thousand dollars you would have got back your money many times over.

You pay no attention, and they continue sending you their "tips," or, as they put it, their "letters of advice." Again comes a reminder that they gave you advice which would have made you rich. If you had been foolish enough to keep the letter referred to you find in reality that they did tell you to gamble in a certain way and that if you had done it you would have made money.

Their method of operating is very simple. THEY SEND OUT TWO, OR MORE, SETS OF LETTERS, ONE EXACTLY OPPOSED TO THE OTHER.

They send YOU a letter telling you that a stock is going up, and they send somebody in another neighborhood a letter saying that the same stock is going down. Perhaps they send a third letter to a third set of correspondents saying that there will be no especial movement in that stock.

Of course, the stock must do one of three things—it must go up or go down or stand still.

If it goes up they write to the people who got the letter saying that it was going up, exclaiming, "See how wise we are! Why don't you come and speculate with us!" If the stock goes down, they write exultant, bragging letters to the victims who got the letter saying the stock was going down. If the stock stands still they write to the third batch of gudgeons and say, "See how wise and conservative we are! The stock has stood still as we told you it would. Come and speculate with us and we will give you the most perfect market advice."

Those to whom they have sent foolish advice they leave alone for a little while until they forget it, and only too often they make gamblers of and utterly ruin those to whom the letter was sent in accordance with the market's accidental up or down movement.

Beware of these Stock Exchange tipsters that try to make a gambler of you; they lie and cheat, and ought to be in jail along with other gamblers and rascals.

But remember that there are two classes of Stock Exchange men, and do not confound these tricksters with reputable Stock Exchange houses that send letters of advice to their own customers and that conscientiously give the best advice that they get from the centre of the financial whirlpool, and do not send one suggestion to one man and directly the opposite to another.

Whatever you do, DO NOT GAMBLE IN THE STREET OR ANYWHERE ELSE.

Remember that every decent Stock Exchange firm has in its copartnership agreement a clause which absolutely forbids the members of the firm to gamble or to speculate on their own account.

That tells you what the men on the inside think about stock speculation and gambling.

They know that sooner or later it will ruin the speculator. And the very Stock Exchange man who gives you advice about speculation will absolutely bind himself and his partner not to speculate AND NOT TO TAKE THE ADVICE THAT HE GIVES YOU.

Some stocks are very dear and some at this moment are doubtless cheap. If you want to buy a stock and keep it as you would buy a piece of land and keep it, BUY IT AND PUT IT AWAY. Do not gamble, do not speculate on margin, do not be such a dreary idiot as to buy mining stock or oil stock when you know nothing about the mine or the oil well. Do not buy stock in anything unless you can see it and know something about it. Unless you have an actual opinion based on actual knowledge, put your money in the United States Postal Savings Bank, where you know it will undoubtedly be safe as long as the United States exists.

This advice will not please some of the Stock Exchange houses and it will displease many bankers, but it is the advice that will set your mind at rest now so that you may do good work and keep your mind at rest when you are old and when you need rest.

Where the Women Vote We Find Less Waste of Human Life

Pauperism, Crime, Disease and the Degeneration Caused by Unequal Wealth Are All but Abolished in New Zealand, a Land Without a Pauper or a Millionaire

By DR. EDWIN F. BOWERS

In this article Dr. Edwin F. Bowers discusses some of the sources of waste which we tolerate without trying to discover means of eliminating them

ONE who sees understandingly, the all but irremediable waste of resources—nitrates, supersoil, waterpower, forests, inland fisheries (from preventable water pollution); of life, human initiative, and efficiency (from avoidable illness); the tremendous loss to agriculturists caused by the inhuman and ignorant destruction of bird life, and the thousand and one other foolish, reckless and short-sighted policies practised almost universally—sincerely wishes that some moiety of the intelligence of the "Spirit of the Hive," of which Maeterlinck speaks, might be inculcated into the human understanding.

Of all loss by waste, that of human life and efficiency is by far the greatest, and one to which least attention has been paid by our paternal government.

Cow and pig mothers receive the considerate and devoted attention of highly trained specialists, their diseases are studied and prescribed for; tons of literature relating to their care are franked broadcast, and the farmer and cattle raiser is assisted in all possible ways in the conservation of these assets.

But Do We Pay As Much Attention To Human Mothers?

This is highly commendable. But the absolute ignoring of the necessities (economic, physical or social) of human mothers inclines us to consider the "man's inhumanity to man" trait of the majority of the race as an evidence of brutal indifference.

We are inclined to think that much of this ignorance or neglect is due to the fact that, in our society but half the adult population—the half least interested in the direct welfare of the family—has any voice in shaping the legislation which governs us.

At least, in the highly civilized countries in which women are recognized as intelligent human beings, and in which the State avails itself of their suffrage, an infinitely better condition exists.

Pauperism, crime and the disease and degeneration due to the improper distribution of wealth are tremendously mitigated, almost entirely abolished. In New Zealand (a land without a pauper or millionaire) all benefit alike in the collective ownership of railroads, parcels post, telegraph and telephone systems, gas, electric and water power plants, packing establishments, water works, etc., etc.

I wish to speak briefly of one extremely important factor in conserving the health of the public—proper eating.

Given a liberal quantity of pure food, properly prepared, the next thing to consider is its preparation for digestion, and of greatest importance, in this connection, is its thorough mastication and insalivation.

"The stomach has no teeth." This seems never to have entered the minds of many millions of otherwise intelligent people. Horace Fletcher has done a great work here. This, however, presupposes that we have teeth; but when the teeth of ninety per cent. of children are practically neglected to start with it is obvious that thorough mastication is frequently impossible.

Boston's System of Inspecting Health of School Children

Boston and several other of the more advanced cities have inaugurated a system of school inspection of the pupils, made by competent dentists, who give instruction as to the proper use of tooth brushes, mouth washes, etc.

These dentists put the teeth of the children in repair by cleaning, filling, extracting (where necessary), and it is astounding to note the increased efficiency of the children in their studies because of this attention.

Their food is properly prepared for digestion in the oral cavity, more completely assimilated in the alimentary tract, and normal physiological activity is restored.

It has been emphasized that the teeth rarely decay (except from strumous conditions) unless the secretions of the mouth are acid; therefore the local use of an alkaline mouth wash, such as soda and water, or a teaspoon of milk of magnesia, worked into the inter-dental spaces by the tongue at night before retiring, will neutralize the acidity and prevent the formation of tartar and pathological mouth conditions.

And, finally, visiting nurses are playing a splendid part in conserving the health of school children by reporting on the condition of eye strain, astigmatism, adenoids and other conditions, which are then corrected by the volunteer nose and throat specialists and oculists.

This is important work, and it is to be sincerely hoped that increasing attention will be paid to these matters in the future.

Reform for the Sea!

By CHESTER FIRKINS

I WENT to the shore to see the sea.
Some falsifier had said to me
That the largest wetness that well could be
Was the wide and well known ocean.
I strolled along by the waving waves
Till I reached the beach where the bather raves
And squeals and splashes and misbehaves
With a wild and gay commotion.

There was one or two in the waters grand;
There were five or six on the yellow sand;
But when I turned towards the good old land—
Great Scott! There were millions merry!
They sat in their costumes damp and chin,
At tables packed in an out-door inn,
And they gave the sea but a scornful grin
As they dipped in their beer and sherry.

"Now, why in the world," said I to me,
"Do they say the sea is a thing to see?—
A dry Sahara it seems to be.
The liquid land is better,
Where the white caps' foam on the glasses bright,
And waiters dive for the tip in sight.
The raging surf may be wet all right,
But the raging 'serve' is wetter."

Now, some one's blundered, and all are blind.
Oh, where is the altruistic mind
To change creation and help mankind
By building a useful ocean?
Come! drain the brine into thirsty Mars.
And open the taps of the seashore bars
Till the surf is beer, and the beach, cigars,
And "Back to the sea! our motion.

Mr. Brandeis Would Help in the Conservation of Humanity

I WANT to help in the conservation of the world's greatest resource—man. We have been careful about conserving property, and have displayed some interest in conserving the natural resources of the nation, the forests and mines and lands, but we have been too negligent of our humanity. I am for improving the condition of the workingman. Any limitations which now exist through interpretations of the courts on the development and progress of our workingmen should be removed.

I want to see the workingman have more leisure. We must see to it that the workingmen are not driven into conditions of life that degrade the individual. We should strive to develop the capacity of all our people, and to this end proper education and good health are necessary. An overworked, uneducated mass of people is what the nation must guard against.—From an interview with Louis D. Brandeis of Boston in the Cincinnati Times-Star.

The Circulation of the AMERICAN is more than 300,000 more than its next highest competitor and exceeds by more than 100,000 the combined circulation of ALL the other evening papers of Boston
